Lower Cost Food Fight To Continue In Congress

60 Members of Consumer Group Plan to Push CCC Extension

By Christine Sadler
Post Staff Writer

The 60 Congressmen who organized themselves last July into a Committee for the Protection of the Consumer will continue their fight during the winter to keep food costs down, Representative Scanlon (Democrat) of Pennsylvania declared yesterday.

Chairman Scanlon said the group wants speedy passage of the bill to extend the Commodity Credit Corp. for 18 months and give it a half-billion dollars to be used for price supports to farmers and consumer subsidies.

Message Awaited

The statement was issued as Congress awaited arrival, probably early this week, of a message from President Roosevelt on the food situation. It was generally expected that the message would support the program of War Food Administrator Marvin Jones and advocate use of subsidies to roll back prices.

Jones urged the House Banking Committee last week to approve extension of the Commodity Credit Corporation until June 30, 1945, a 500-million dollar boost in the agency's borrowing authority, and permission to sell perishable goods below parity prices.

An unidentified "influential congressional leader" was reported by the Associated press last night to have predicted a veto for any legislation prohibiting subsidy payments to keep food prices down.

The CCC will expire at the year's end unless it is extended by Congress. In July Congress voted a six month's continuation only after the President vetoed another measure which would have prohibited use of the agency's funds for general subsidy payments.

New Subsidy Fight

Powerful support has gathered in the Banking Committee behind a move to put another subsidy ban in the new legislation. That action has been demanded by Edward A. O'Neal, president of the American Farm Bureau Federation, and leaders of other agricultural groups.

"Our group is most strongly in favor both of the use of subsidies to protect the consumer and the use of incentive payments to increase production of food," Scanlon's statement said. "By using subsidies, we are able to protect both the farmer and the public. By using incentive payment plans, crop insurance and similar measures, we can increase sharply the production of food vital to the war.

"The Committee for the Protection of the Consumer is serving notice that Congress is not unanimously opposed to working in the interest of the consumer and the working farmer," he continued.

Onward, Upward

By the Associated Press

Allied Headquarters, Algiers, Oct. 3.—Allied Fifth Army troops have struck up to the German river line northeast of Naples by entering Benevento, while the British Eighth Army plunging up the famous road of conquerors has lopped off a wide area on the Adriatic side of Italy, it was announced today.

The Germans have pulled back from the entire Melfi salient in the central sector, official reports disclosed.

Benevento, 32 miles northeast of Naples, is high in the mountains on the main lateral road and railroad running from the big port, and dominates the valley of the Calore River which flows into the Volturno River. It is along the Volturno and Calore Rivers that the Nazis have been expected to make a stand against the Allied advance along the Appian Way to Rome.

Still Fighting in Corsica

Details of the thrust were not disclosed, but American units of the Fifth Army were last reported at Avellino, 15 miles to the south. The road from Avellino to Benevento runs through the twisting mountain valley of the Sabato River.

In Corsica, Moroccan Goumiers and sharpshooters seized Teghime Hill, the "key to Bastia," after beating off violent counterattacks and now hold the whole ridge dominating Bastia and Biguglia Lake, a French communique announced.

French shock troops and American rangers closed in on the Bastia area in nearby sectors, routing several German detachments and pushing to the northern point of Cap Corse. All Corsica thus has been cleared of Nazis except for a strip along the east coast from the area of Cervione to Luri on Cap Corse. This strip, virtually cut in two, is some 30 miles long and four or five miles wide at the most, and the Germans are attempting to escape by sea.

Frigento Taken

Fifth Army armored units also made contact with deploying Nazi elements along the west coast just north of Naples. Meanwhile AMG (Allied Military Government) officials strove to get the wrecked city of Naples back to some semblance of normal life, and engineers rushed repairs to the heavily-damaged port.

The Fifth Army captured Frigento, 45 miles inland from Naples in clearing the central salient.

The front line now runs from Naples to Benevento, to Frigento, and almost due north to the mouth

Laundry Price Boosts Up to 10% Reported

Increases Here Granted By Regional OPA, Several Managers Say

Although official notification has not been received, several managers of Washington laundries disclosed last night that they had learned from an authoritative source that a price increase for individual customers as high as 10 per cent for some laundries had recently been granted by the regional OPA in New York, which has jurisdiction over the District.

District OPA said yesterday that it had not been informed of the decisionfi but explained that notification would probably be sent directly to managers of laundries affected by the ruling.

Wage and price increases in 20 laundries were sought jointly in a petition filed by the Laundry Dry Cleaning Owners' Association after the War Manpower Commission had contended it was difficult to recruit workers and cut down turnover because of low wages. It was understood that the raise in customer prices was permitted to provide for an increase of wages for laundry workers.

According to the unofficial word received here, the price increases were less than were requested and 4 of the 20 laundries asking for the raise were refused.

Customers must be notified of the price increase within 15 days after the price schedule goes into effect, it was explained. All dry cleaners and laundries are required to have maximum price lists available for public inspection during business hours. If the management fails to produce the list upon request, the customer may report the laundry to OPA.

Those laundries which sought the increase, four of which will not obtain them, although their names were not disclosed: Old Colony, Yale, Quality and Service, Bell, Franklin, Dupont, Elite, Banner, West End, Tolman, Bergmann's, Page, Morningside, Colonial, Mayfair, Arcade-Sunshine, Carroll's, Home, Manhattan and Conger's.

Hill to Attack Plan to Draft Fathers by Age

Other Vital Issues Scheduled for Action On Packed Agenda

Boiling issues promising to affect national policy in both the world-wide military field and in the home civilian domain combined last night to shape up one of Congress' most notable weeks in many months.

Culmination of the long Senate fight over drafting of fathers was in sight, with these developments and situations ready to precipitate conflicts on both sides of the Capitol:

1. In the father-draft fight, Senator Hill of Alabama, Democratic whip, said he would take the floor to attack the Taft substitute for the doomed Wheeler bill to postpone the drafting of fathers at least until the first of the year. The proposal by Senator Taft and a group of colleagues would divide available fathers into age classes and provide for calling the youngest first, in addition to tightening up of deferment restrictions.

2. Four Senators recently returned from a 'round-the-world tour of fighting fronts prepared to give to a closed session of the Senate on Wednesday a report of their observations that, it was conceded, might have a considerable influence on international relations, war and supply strategy, and postwar plans.

3. Determination of Congress' views on the part the Nation should play in after-the-war maintenance of peace was expected to make progress, as Chairman Connally (Democrat) of Texas, and members of the Foreign Relations subcommittee worked on drafts of a resolution certain to open up a momentous debate when it reaches the Senate floor.

4. An uproar over the Treasury's suggestions for raising $10,650,000,000 more annually in tax revenue was expected with presentation of the proposals today. Members of Congress who have

Heavy Luxury Levies

Administration Tax Plan Adds 12½-Cent Cost to Every Drink

By Francis M. Le May
Associated Press Staff Writer

The Administration will ask Congress today to put the so-called luxuries of life—such as liquor, beer, pop, gum, tobacco and traveling—on an all-out war footing, by unprecedented increases in tax rates.

By these rates, to be proposed before the House Ways and Means Committee by Treasury Secretary Henry Morgenthau, the tax on one drink of liquor would be 12½ cents.

This is a part of the Administration's program to add $10,650,000,000 to the present annual revenue collection rate of $38,239,000,000. It will embrace suggestions for sharp increases in individual and corporation income rates, as well as in excise taxes. Of the $10,650,000,000, the Treasury would refund $3,560,000,000 to individual taxpayers after the war.

Administration Program

After preliminary discussions with Morgenthau, members of Congress today outlined the Administration program as follows:

1. Individual incomes—rates to be raised so as to produce an additional $6,610,000,000 annually, including the postwar refundable $3,560,000,000. The present 20 per cent withholding levy against the taxable portions of wages and salaries would be graduated upward, possibly to a rate of 30 per cent for some incomes. The individual exemptions for married persons would be pared from $1200 to $1100; exemption for single persons would remain at $500; and dependents reduced from $350 to $300. The Victory tax would be integrated in the regular income tax.

2. Corporation incomes—a rise in the rate from 40 to 50 per cent, calculated to bring in an additional $1,110,000,000.

3. Raises in excises (the dollar sum representing increase in revenue):—

Big Boost in Beer Tax

Beer ($7 to $10 a barrel)—$210,000,000;

Wine (10 to 50 cents a gallon, for the lower potency group; increases also for the fortified groups) —$60,000,000;

Cigarettes ($3.50 to $5.00 per thousand—no differential as to sizes)—$371,000,000;

Cigars (rates thus far unexplained)—66 million dollars;

Tobacco (smoking, chewing and snuff—18 to 34 cents a pound)—47 million dollars;

General admissions (10 per cent to 30 per cent)—292 million dollars;

Cabarets (5 to 30 per cent)— 82 million dollars;

Bowling alleys ($10 per alley to 20 per cent of receipts) billiard tables (20 per cent of receipts)—27 million dollars;

Transportation of persons (10 per cent to 30 per cent)—188 million dollars;

Communications (long distance 20 to 25 per cent; local telephone

3-Way Parley Location to Be Selected Soon

Decision by Russia, Britain, U. S. Seen Within Few Days

By John M. Hightower
Associated Press Staff Writer

Negotiations over the time and place for a meeting of the foreign secretaries of the United States, Great Britain and Russia are about complete. A decision as to whether the conference will be held in London or Moscow probably will be made in the next few days.

Also within that period, Secretary of State Hull is expected to make known whether he will attend. Close friends of the Secretary have said he would go if he felt that the best interests of the Nation required his attendance, but so far he has withheld any commitment.

Parallel Military Talks

Reports that the diplomatic discussions would be matched by talks among Soviet, British and American military leaders generally met with expressions of approval here. An Associated Press dispatch from London said Russian staff officers would participate in previously planned sessions of ranking British and American commanders.

The projected inclusion of the Russians strongly suggested that Moscow now feels as Washington and London have felt all along, that the time is rapidly nearing for absolute coordination of all the armies attacking the Nazi "fortress of Europe."

Invasion Timing Problem

An invasion of Europe from the British Isles, making the start of the main Anglo-American drive to victory, particularly will need to be carefully timed with Russian operations, in order to achieve maximum success.

The main difficulty in fixing the date for the tri-partite meeting of foreign secretaries has arisen from the fact that the Russians have insisted on meeting in Moscow, while the British and American governments have held out for London.

Pronya River Line Cracked By Red Drive

Germans Reported 'In Hasty Retreat;' Mogilev Imperiled

By the Associated Press

London, Monday, Oct. 4.—The Red army cracked the Pronya River line 28 miles east of Mogilev in White Russia yesterday, Moscow announced early today, while Soviet airmen sank five troop-filled German boats apparently trying to evacuate the final Nazi rearguard from the enemy's shattered foothold in the Caucasus opposite the Crimea.

The smash across the Pronya threatened to turn the German's upper Dnieper defense line and hurled them "into a hasty retreat" in central White Russia.

More than 2000 Germans were killed and 70 villages seized in the drive toward Mogilev and Gomel, to south, said the communique.

Drive in Last Stage

The Caucasian campaign apparently was in its last stage. Berlin's high command admittted the loss of Staro-Tamanskaya, virtually the last Axis foothold on the Kerch Strait east of the Crimea, and the Russians said their airmen killed hundreds of German troops in that area, ashore and at sea.

Three barges and several motor boats filled with Germans, and 60 trucks, were destroyed, and three Nazi companies dispersed or annihilated.

The Soviet airmen also struck into the center of the Crimea, touching off 25 heavy explosions amid freight cars laden with enemy war equipment at the Dzhankoi junction.

Fierce Counterattacks

Dzhankoi is on the line running northwestward out of the Crimea to Kherson — the last available Nazi escape route by land from the peninsula. The other railway running north to Melitopol already is under Soviet artillery fire, and the latest Russian aerial announcement said three German troop trains were wrecked at Meli-

LaGuardia Calls Government Food Stores 'Fantastic'

New York, Oct. 3 (AP).—Declaring the amount of Government and Army food in storage was "simply fantastic," Mayor F. H. LaGuardia today suggested the Government take an inventory as a step toward releasing food for civilian consumption.

"I have some figures before me that are simply fantastic as to the amount of food that is in storage," he said.

LaGuardia also suggested New Yorkers eat without butter in hotels and restaurants to overcome the current butter shortage.

Missing Persons' Photos Broadcast

New York, Oct. 3 (AP).—Television was used to broadcast photographs of missing persons for the first time by the New York Police Department, and it was predicted that criminals, "whose faces will be as familiar as those of movie heroes," will be found by the same method.

The 10-minute program, which showed the likenesses of seven persons and was beamed over Station W2ZWV, was seen by 20,000 people in a 50-mile radius, station officials said.

Goal $4,800,000

Community Fund Drive to Open With U. S. Employe Rally

Two thousand Government workers will assume their part in the $4,800,000 Community War Fund at a rally in the Departmental Auditorium today at 12:30 p. m. when Earl Godwin, radio commentator, will develop the campaign theme, "Crown thy good with brotherhood."

Preston Delano, chairman of the division, will preside and Herbert J. Willett, jr., executive of the fund, will also speak. Music will be by the Army Air Forces band, directed by Capt. Alf Heiberg.

Godwin said yesterday: "Nothing we can do is enough to help the men in our armed forces to have decent recreation; nothing we can do for our Allies is enough to compensate for the suffering they have gone through; and it stands to reason that we must look after our people 'next door' to maintain home morale."

There will be an equally important meeting at 12:30 p. m. by campaign workers at the Statler Hotel, Beatrice Hodson of the fund committee reported.

To eliminate any confusion regarding the annual war fund and Red Cross campaigns, Norman H. Davis, chairman of the American Red Cross, yesterday issued this statement:

"The American Red Cross and the National and Community War Funds carry on separate drives and independent activities, but they supplement each other and are united in the will to serve.

"In accordance with the decision of the President's War Relief Control Board, the Red Cross will conduct its 1944 War Fund next March, while the National War Fund campaign is being held this month. The Red Cross wishes the National War Fund leaders every success in their appeal."

The Pogrom Is On

Danish Jews Risk Being Shot To Seek Haven in Sweden

By the Associated Press

Stockholm, Oct. 3.—Hundreds of Jews who risked being shot to death by German patrols along the Danish coast rather than be deported to Nazi labor camps poured into Sweden today as Adolf Hitler's anti-Semitic purge in Denmark fanned Swedish feeling.

Skirmishes and bloodshed were reported when a few Jews resisted arrest in Copenhagen, and others were pursued through Jutland by squads of Gestapo men.

The deportation of Danish Jews to Germany and Poland started from Copenhagen yesterday as the Nazis ignored, at least temporarily, a Swedish government offer to provide haven for 8000 of the 10,000 Jews whom the Germans blamed for the militant opposition to German occupation of what once was Hitler's "model protectorate."

Carrying small bundles of personal belongings, many Jews arrived in Sweden in rowboats and fishing smacks after eluding reinforced German patrols which were ordered to shoot anyone trying to escape.

They came so fast and at so many scattered places along the southwestern Swedish coast, which at its closest point is only 2½ miles across the sound from Denmark, that no accurate count was yet available, but it was estimated that at least 1100 have reached Sweden since rumors of the purge swept through Denmark a week ago.

Dr. Niels H. D. Bohr, Danish physicist and Nobel prize winner in physics in 1922, was reported among the refugees reaching Sweden.

Bohr was largely responsible for establishment of an institute for theoretical physics at the University of Copenhagen, which became one of the great intellectual centers of Europe.

Feeling ran high, especially in southern Sweden which once was a part of Denmark.

The Swedish press acclaimed the government's latest move to aid the Jews in Denmark, but the newspaper Social-Demokraten, organ of the dominant government party, said "all our humanitarian efforts are killed by the sadistic methods of the other side (German), who use every opportunity to destroy the Jewish race."

The Stockholms-Tidningen prethe Nazis would continue to fail in their efforts to break Danish resistance. Dagens Nyheter said Denmark would no longer be a "rest station for German soldiers" and declared it impossible to separate the Jews from Danish cultural traditions."

The Danish news service reported that at least 1600 Danish Jews had been rounded up so far by the Germans.

The roundup started Friday night after all telephone communications had been cut in Copenhagen to frustrate attempts of the Jews to warn each other that SS troops and Gestapo agents were engaging in large-scale arrests.

However, as the Nazis made the rounds they found that many Jews

Nazis Attack Allied Positions On Dodecanese Island of Coo

By the Associated Press

Cairo, Oct. 3.—Germany unleased a sea and air-borne attack against newly-won Allied positions on the island of Coo, in the narrow Aegean Sea today, striking back in her defense of Europe in a new theater—the ancient battlelanes of the Athenians and the Spartans.

A terse British announcement of the air and amphibious attack on Allied-held Coo, second largest island in the Italian Dodecanese group, added the cryptic statement:

"Necessary countermeasures have been taken by the defending forces."

Immediate information on the progress of the fighting and the size of the attacking force Germany was able to draw from her strained reserves was lacking, but it was not believed here that an assault had yet been launched on a large scale.

Coo and its excellent airfield were seized by British parachute troops and sea-borne forces on September 22, along with Lero, in the Dodecanese group, and the Greek island of Samos to the north.

The Sunday morning attack was the first evidence that Germany was prepared seriously to contest the Allied advance up the Aegean Island stepping stones to Greece, although repeated Nazi air raids have been made on Coo since the Allied occupation.

(A disptach from Ankara said yesterday that wachers from the Turkish coast estimated that at least 60 planes were hurled against Coo and Lero in a German attack

Jap Strongholds Along New Guinea Coast Outflanked

Allied Headquarters in the Southwest Pacific (Monday), Oct. 4.—Capture of Finschhafen from the Japanese has resulted in the outflanking of all enemy strong points on the New Guinea coast between Finschhafen and Madang, Gen. Douglas MacArthur announced today.

The MacArthur communique also disclosed that Allied losses during the entire Huon Gulf campaign were "exceedingly light."

War Sidelights

Goebbels Warns of Hardships

By the Associated Press

London, Oct. 3.—Alternately threatening and reassuring a Berlin Harvest Day crowd, Propaganda Minister Paul Goebbels today promised Germany enough food for the winter and then warned that anyone who placed personal comfort "above the honor of our people" would be beheaded.

But State's Secretary Herbert Backe told the same audience of the severe drought that had gripped all east German territories. The year's harvest consequently had been below expectatoins, he said.

Goebbels warned that a slackening of Allied air raids the last few weeks was due to adverse weather and that "we must reckon upon severe setbacks in the future."

But he boasted that "Flying Fortresses will some day become flying coffins" and contended that Germany would win the air war in the end. British and American air attacks have "failed utterly" to destroy German's munitions and industry, he declared.

Losses in war potential, he added, "are being compensated for by advantages of a strategic nature."

He concluded with the boast that "the march on Berlin has failed."

Stockholm, Oct. 3 (AP).—New reports from Norway confirm previous rumors of mutiny among German submarine crews in far northern Norway, a Norwegian legation statement said today.

Townspeople in Tromsoe, one of the largest U-boat bases in Norway, were quoted as saying "discipline is very bad and the marines seem to neglect their officers completely when they are ashore.

"In the middle of the night, heavy fighting between U-boat officers and their marines can often be seen in the streets," the statement continued.

Chinese Towns Fall in New Jap Offensive

By the Associated Press

Chungking, Oct. 3.—Reinforced Japanese divisions have launched a new offensive in southeastern China and the Chinese high command announced today its troops had been forced to give up several towns, including the railway city of Suancheng, 80 miles south of Nanking.

The Japanese appeared to be aiming at dispersing Chinese concentrations and forestalling attacks on their strongholds in the triangle formed by Shanghai, Nanking and Hangchow.

The action was centered in northern Chekiang, southern Kiangsu and southern Anhwei Provinces.

"The fighting is assuming more and more extensive proportions," the Chinese communique said.

Since Friday Japanese planes have been actively bombing Chinese positions and there were repeated and concentrated assaults by the Japanese in the Hangchow area, 100 miles southwest of Shanghai.

Chinese guerilla and regular forces have been harassing the enemy off and on for over six years in this area.

A prediction that it would "not be long before China launches a counteroffensive against the enemy" was made by a new army spokesman, 41-year-old American-trained Maj. Gen. C. C. Tseng.

Finschhafen's Fall Blow to Defenses, MacArthur Says

By the Associated Press

Allied Headquarters in the Southwest Pacific (Monday) Oct. 4.—Gen. Douglas MacArthur, in a review today of the northeastern New Guinea campaign, said that capture of Finschhafen has eliminated all defensive value of enemy-held centers to the north and west as far as Madang.

By seizure of the air and naval base on the eastern coast of the Huon Peninsula, he said, the Allies not only have gained complete control of the Huon Gulf but have obligated the Japanese to withdraw toward rear bases on the north shore of New Guinea.

Finschhafen was taken Saturday by veteran Australian troops to culminate a 10-day campaign during which the position was surrounded effectively from its three land flanks and the Japanese defenders were trapped with their backs to the sea.

Japs Caught by Surprise

This enveloping movement caught the Japanese by surprise, the general said, and as a result they lost heavily. Allied casualties, in comparison, were described as light.

A forced withdrawal by the enemy to Madang as a result of Allied domination of the Huon Peninsula through the occupation of Finschhafen would mean abandoning nearly 150 miles of coast—virtually the entire New Guinea shoreline of Vitiaz Strait.

Awareness of this eventuality may have dictated the fierce resistance put up by the Finschhafen garrison in the week before it was overrun Saturday.

As against the comparative collapse and flight of the much stronger enemy force at Lae, seized some two weeks earlier, the Japanese marines at Finschhafen fought almost to the last man before bowing to the Australians' bristling bayonets.

100 Jap Barges Sunk in Month

A spokesman said today that more than 100 Japanese barges were sunk and damaged in September.

Action against the barges was mainly between Choiseul and Kolombangara Islands in the Solomons. With the enemy possibly engaged in evacuating troops from Kalombangara and supplying whatever holding force he is maintaining on the island.

More than 50 of the barges were sunk or damaged during the last week of September.

Last Thursday night American destroyers intercepted 12 light Japanese barges 15 miles off Tuki Point, northernmost point on Kolombangara, the spokesman said, sinking six for certain and three probably, Three escaped.

Continent-Wide

War Changes Force Nazi Troop Shifts

By the Associated Press

Madrid, Oct. 3.—The German high command has engaged in a gigantic continent-wide reshuffle of its troops made necessary by retreats on the Russian and Italian Fronts and the conversion of former rest areas such as France and the central Balkans into potentially active war zones.

French partisans last Friday reported the first wave of young veterans from the Russian Front on their way to the Riviera, and over the weekend younger troops relieved older men in garrisons in Paris itself.

The guard also was changed in the Atlantic wall fortresses in Brittany and in the area of Bordeaux.

Exhausted and battered units from active fronts henceforth will be sent to rest camps in Germany and Austria, according to travelers reaching Spain.

Frenchmen from the Riviera and the Cote d'Argent section along the Bay of Biscay said rest hospitals in those sectors have been converted into first aid and battle hospitals.

One of the largest rest areas now being evacuated is the Rhone Valley, from Avignon north to Valence. It lies in what may eventually be an invasion route through southern France and is between the Mediterranean and the Savoy region, where French guerillas hold sway.

U. S. Plane Battles Nine Zero Fighters And Downs One

A United States reconnaissance plane making a trip over the Japanese-held island of Nauru, north of the Solomons, was attacked by 9 Zero fighters September 30, Solomons time, and shot down one, the Navy reported yesterday.

The announcement indicated that American forces are keeping a close watch on enemy activity in the Nauru area. A previous communique reported that an American reconnaissance plane in the vicinity of Nauru on September 27 engaged five enemy fighters, shooting down one, and probably downing another.

Communique No. 472 said:

"South Pacific (all dates are east longitude):

"1. On the night of September 30, a U S. reconnaissance plane engaged nine Zero fighters 15 miles north of Nauru Island. One enemy plane was shot down."

Germans Quit Central Italy Salient as Fifth and Eighth Armies Smash Northward

A great area was chopped off by the collapse of the enemy's Melfi salient. Towns occupied here by the right wing of the Fifth Army and by the Eighth Army along the Adriatic include Vallata, Monteleone, Biccari, Orsara, Savingnano, Torrebaggiore, Lucera, Apricena, Bisaccia, Grottaminarda, and Lesina.

While the main battlefield of the immediate future appears to be the plains between Naples and Rome, it is the Adriatic coastal area that has been the historic route of armies invading Italy. Most such armies have come from the north, but the Eighth Army is reversing this direction on the conquerors highway.

Rains Hinder Progress

The Adriatic coastal road leads to the Emilian Way, running into the heart of the Po Valley There are no high mountains there such as would face the Fifth Army north of Rome, but the Germans surely would not leave this door into the strategic Po Valley open, and undoubtedly are planning a stand somewhere between the Fortore River and Rimini, where the Po Valley opens like a fan.

Much of yesterday's fighting occurred in heavy rains that hindered progress in some places. Bad weather grounded a large part of the Allied air fleets but American fighter bombers hit enemy transportation in the Isernia-Campobasso area and a bridge at Concello.

One Allied officer said the withdrawing Germans were employing a system of backward hops with the longest posssible delay between each leap. Enemy units hold their positions as long as they can and retreat only to escape annihilation. Innumerable small pockets of determined men were left behind to delay the Allied armies.

The Fifth Army met its fiercest opposition on its right wing and along the west coast. In the central sector there was less resistance. The Eighth Army had much easier going than the Fifth in this area and along the Adriatic, although both had to wipe out enemy pockets in brisk fighting.

There are as yet no details on how far north of Naples British armor has progresssed, but it is understood that the advance there has been relatively slow against German rearguards pushed up the coast from Naples.

Detruction of a number of self-propelled German 88-millimeter guns was reported.

Slight Activity, Says Berlin

The German communique said there was only slight activity in Italy, with the Allies following Nazi rearguards retreating to the northwest. In northern Corsica, it added, the Germans repulsed attacks by Italian troops, guerillas, and French Moroccan units.

With yesterday's advance, the Allies gained control of the main water sources for Naples, Bari, Brindisi, and Taranto, whose water supply had been reduced to dangerous levels by demolitions of aqueducts. Engineers began repairing them with Italians as laborers.

Headquarters announced that photographs showed heavy damage in the Friday attack by African-based Liberators on the Messerschmitt aircraft works and Henschel locomotive plant at Wiener Neustadt in Austria.

Bombs damaged a large assembly shop in a factory producing Messerschmitts and also struck a camouflaged hangar. Other buildings, stores of material and railway tracks.

Several hits were scored on a Henschel Works building making locomotive tenders, the official statement added, and in storage areas and sheds, while bombs fell on the north end of the Steyr Daimler Works making armored cars.

Three Allied planes were lost yesterday in attacks that included destruction of 20 motor trucks and damaging of 25 more in the Isernia-Campobasso area some 50 miles northeast of Naples, and three direct hits on the bridge at Cancello. RAF Spitfires downed three German planes in another sortie.

Delayed reports disclosed that U. S. A-36 Invaders bombed and shot up enemy transports and the Avezzano airdrome east of Rome Friday, and also downed two Junkers 52 transport planes.

200,000 French Flee Germans

Algiers, Oct. 3 (AP).—Interior Minister Andre Philip of the French Committee of National Liberation said today that on the basis of reports from the underground there are more than 200,000 Frenchmen living in "illegality" in the Alps or Pyrenees after fleeing to avoid deportation to Germany.

Forty thousand Frenchmen have been executed by the Germans up to March, 1943, he said.

RAF Blasts Europe 3d Straight Night

Pounding Follows Daylight Sweeps Over German-Held Airfields by U. S. Bombers

By the Associated Press

London, Monday Oct. 4.—Large formations of heavy RAF bombers headed over the continent for the third consecutive night last night after wide daylight sweeps by U. S. Marauder bombers against enemy airfields in France and Holland.

Residents on the southeast coast of England said the RAF formations appeared larger than those which dropped 500 tons of bombs on Munich Saturday night and bombed Hagen for the first time Friday night. Soon after the bombers crossed the coast the Berlin, Paris, Calais, Bremen and Friesland radios left the air.

In one of the day's sweeps Fighting French pilots, flying Boston bombers, attacked a power station on the outskirts of Paris. The fliers said bombs and cannon shells hit the targets, and huge orange flames and a 3000-foot pillar of smoke rose in the air.

The Paris radio said five buildings were destroyed and eight persons were killed and 40 injured in a southeast suburb.

The U. S. Marauder operations were carried out without loss of any of these medium bombers.

Twenty-four German fighters were shot out of the air by RAF, Allied and Dominion fighters in a series of daylight sweeps. An Air Ministry official said this was the greatest number destroyed by the RAF in any one day's offensive operations over enemy territory. Allied losses were 4 RAF medium and 11 fighters.

The Marauders bombed the airfields at Woensdrecht, Haamstede and Amsterdam-Schipol, in Holland, this morning and the Beauvais-Tille airfield in France late this afternoon.

Five hundred tons of bombs were rained on Munich in a 25-minute attack, the air ministry news service said, with ten 4000-pound bombs dropped every minute.

Munich, rail bottleneck through which Germany pushes reinforcements and supplies into Italy, already had gained the doubtful distinction of being the first German city to be placed under two-directional aerial poundings by the American-British double punch method, by reason of the September 6 RAF night attack and Friday's Fortress raid.

Last night's raid foreshadowed a greatly stepped up bombing of the Reich when new Allied airdromes in Italy are put into operation, bringing practically all of Germany within easy range from the west or south.

The Germans acknowledged "major damage in several quarters of the town" as a result of the impressive British raid. Nine bombres were said to have been lost from this and other night operations, including attacks on the German Ruhr and Rhineland and minelaying in enemy waters. Munich had been badly battered in eight previous raids.

Formations of American medium bombers, escorted by Spitfires, winged eastward in great waves after daylight to hit Nazi fighterplane bases at Woensdrecht, Haamstede and Amsterdam-Schipol.

The Spitfires destroyed seven enemy planes without loss.

All the bombers returned safely, headquarters said, and the daylight procession continued with other formations of marauders striking at a German airfield at Beauvais-Tille in France late in the afternoon.

There was some aerial activity over Britain itself Saturday night and London had a short alert when one or two enemy planes penetrated to the metropolitan area and dropped bombs at scattered points. Little damage and no injuries were reported. British defenses brought down one raider.

Corsicans Hate Italian Troops Worse Than Nazis, Philip Finds

Copyright, 1943, Washington Post and New York Tribune, Inc.

Algiers, Oct. 2 (Delayed).—Andre Philip, French commissioner of interior, returning today from a visit to Corsica, predicted the fall of Bastia, last German foothold, in another day or two, but said the main preoccupation of the Corsicans was getting rid of 80,000 Italians who are hated locally worse than the Germans.

Among the Corsicans who have endured 10 months of Italian occupation, the anti-Italian feeling is particularly bitter. The presence of a huge garrison in a poverty-stricken island of 220,000 people has brought deepening economic misery to Corsica. Philip said that for the last six months conditions of near famine have prevailed until the whole island ate nothing but apples for breakfast.

Wages sank lower than ever, but prices soared. Beans cost $5.20 a kilo, eggs 52 cents each, and wine, of which Corsica has a superabundance, $4.16 a bottle. Shoes cost $14 to $16 a pair in Ajaccio and $62.40 in the interior.

Moreover the Italians commandeered the best hotels and residences. Worst of all, Philip said, there were a few blackshirts who tortured Corsican patriots.

He told how the patriot, Czamarogne, seized by the Italians when his plane crashed on a secret mission, shot himself following torture rather than reveal the names of the underground leaders and their plans.

"It is quite clear that some of these Italians will never get back to Sardinia," Philip declared.

Philip conceded that evacuation of Italians was up to the Allied high command, but he urged the garrison be removed quickly to Sardinia before Corsican resentment could find more direct expression. He also admitted Italian soldiers were helping the patriots and the regular French forces to reduce the Germans at the Bastia bridgehead. No Italian has been disarmed.

Fear "Darlan" Deal

Philip's remarks pointed up the attitude of the French toward Italy. The governing committee held a long discussion today on Allied relations with Italy, and the members, almost without exception, were reported disturbed over the tendency to treat Premier Marshal Pietro Badoglio's government as a cobelligerent against Germany. To them unconditional surrender means just that. They fail to see why Italy should not be treated as an enemy-occupied territory.

The members are concerned chiefly over the moral and psychological effect on the underground movement inside France. They fear that French patriots might prematurely conclude that another Darlan deal was in the offing.

UMW Warns of Coal Shortage Unless WLB Grants Pay Raise

By Ben W. Gilbert
Post Staff Writer

The United Mine Workers yesterday bluntly warned the Government that coal rationing will be necessary unless the War Labor Board approves a "satisfactory" wage agreement for the Nation's coal miners.

An editorial in the current issue of the United Mine Workers Journal hinted guardedly that a production slowdown was now in effect in the country's mines, and would continue in effect until the Government approves an acceptable wage contract for the industry.

An agreement with Illinois coal operators which would boost the miners' daily wage by $1.75, part in compensation for "travel time" underground and part as pay for more work, is now before the War Labor Board for approval.

Meets Some Objections

Since the agreement meets a number of the technical objections of the War Labor Board to other wage proposals advanced by UMW, it is believed in some quarters that WLB approval will be granted. However, approval is by no means assured at this point.

Pertinent paragraphs from the UMW editorial follow:

"An adequate supply of coal is not dependent upon Government or individual ownership operation. It is not dependent upon rationing. American coal miners can produce all the coal the Nation requires. An adequate coal supply, however, is dependent upon a square deal for American coal miners.

"A basic collective bargaining wage agreement in the bituminous and anthracite coal industries will do more to solve the problem of an adequate coal supply than all the collective thinking of the bureaucrats and all the rationing systems which the OPA can concoct.

Ample Coal Supply

"A satisfied working force in the coal industry will produce an ample coal supply, despite the inefficiency of "throttle bottom" management within the industry.

"If the American war production dependent upon coal is to meet the quota set by our war chiefs, if the people of the Nation are to be spared the inconveniences and discomforts of coal, rationing, if the health of the Nation is to be safeguarded, if we are to meet coal needs of the occupied countries, then bureaucratic bungling must give way to a common sense appraisal of coal production which, in simple language, spells a satisfactory basic wage agreements in the coal industry.

"Nothing short of a basic wage agreement can solve the problems of coal production and distribution."

Coal Rationing Studied

The Office of Price Administration is considering a system for the rationing of coal—for use if and when the fuel supply situation makes it necessary. It is understood, however, that officials hope to get by without coal rationing by maintaining restrictions on the flow of coal to insure uniform distribution.

The UMW editorial expressed doubts that efforts to bring additional workers into the mines would succeed — thus indicating that it believed our ability to avoid coal rationing will depend upon the coal mined by the present labor force.

"Men who grow up outside of the coal mining areas shun coal mining and only accept employment in coal mines as a last resort," the editorial said. "The majority of the younger and middle-aged men in the coal industry, whose family setups will permit, and who can get jobs in other industries, have left the coal mines and they have probably left for good.

"Higher wages and more desirable working conditions clinch this fact.

"The coal industry cannot secure new men and indulge in a high rate of turnover like shipbuilding, aircraft manufacture and railroading."

Stockholm, Oct. 3 (AP).—The Stockholm Tidingen's Berlin correspondent said today all German boys and girls over 10 years old would be mobilized for air raid rescue work, and that those under 10 were to be removed from cities likely to be bombed.

Transport Plane Makes Sea Record

London, Oct. 3 (AP).—A new record of 9 hours and 34 minutes for an Atlantic crossing in a transport plane was established last week by a DC-53 skytrooper of the United States Army Air Transport command. A bomber has crossed in 6 hours and 12 minutes.

The transport, carrying 21 passengers, was aided by a strong tail wind.

Big Battle for Europe Barely Begun—Knox

By the Associated Press

Allied Headquarters, Algiers, Oct. 3.—Navy Secretary Frank Knox, returning here from the Battle of Naples, which he watched from a destroyer, praised "the cooperation and coordination" of American and British land, sea and air arms today but added: "We are still only attacking outposts and have not yet assaulted the Fortress of Europe."

He said the German army was as numerous today as at the start of the war and any idea that the war in Europe would be "over by Christmas" was foolish overoptimism.

He said operations in Italy were the most successful yet achieved by the Allies in the war because they marked a new high in cooperation and coordination.

"The amphibious operation has come into its own because it is based on the maximum use of all three services," Knox said.

He said Army leaders had expressed high satisfaction with the gun support given by British and American warships offshore. He said naval gunnery was so accurate one German machine-gun nest had been knocked out at ten-mile range.

The Secretary presented the Gold Star in lieu of a second Distinguished Service Medal to Vice Admiral Henry K. Hewitt of Hackensack, N. J., commander of the U. S. Naval forces in northwest African waters.

He presented the Legion of Merit to Rear Admiral John L. Hall, jr. of Alexandria, Va., commanding American amphibian forces in this theater; Rear Admiral Lyal A. Davidson, task force commander, and Rear Admiral Richard Lansing Conolly, commanding landing craft and bases.

In cautioning against overoptimism, Knox said "the war is only beginning." He later modified this to say he meant the hardest part of the fight against Adolf Hitler's stronghold of Europe was beginning.

Army Court Finds Selfridge Field Sergeant Guilty

Selfridge Field, Mich., Oct. 3 (AP). A court martial today convicted Master Sergt. Myron B. Collins, former acting sergeant major of this Army Air Base, of fixing enlistments and transfers for a price in violation of the Ninety-sixth Article of war.

Collins was sentenced to 18 months at hard labor and dishonorably discharged. The counts included acceptance of a diamond ring, jeweled watch, $300 in cash and the use of an automobile from George K. Lutfy, Detroit, father of two enlisted men at Selfridge Field, and the use of a cabin cruiser from Mrs. Ella Pressel, also of Detroit, mother of a third soldier Collins was accused of favoring.

Gasoline Stamp Counterfeiters' Den Raided by OPA

Philadelphia, Oct. 3 (INS). — A hideout where counterfeit gasoline ration stapms worth 100 million gallons were printed in the last four months was raided today by OPA agents.

In a two-room print shop the agents found a high speed cylinder press, complete sets of plates, dies and other equipment. Also seized were stamps representing 10 million gallons.

OPA agents said the counterfeits were excellent, and had been peddled throughout the East. They arrested one man, but said they sought Dennie A. Hill, 39, shipyard worker recently discharged from the Army, for questioning. OPA agents used ultraviolet rays to spot the fraudulent stamps.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

POSSIBILITY of a fourth term and shades of the famous purge campaign of 1938 came up the other day at a White House conference attended by Senator George, of Georgia, whom the President tried unsuccessfully to defeat by invading Georgia in the 1938 primary. At the conference also were Representative Doughton of North Carolina, Justice Byrnes and Judge Vinson.

The President was discussing the new tax program, its effect on Congress and the public, when he remarked: "Now let's get political."

Senator George picked him up immediately. "Looks like you and I were running again in 1944," he remarked with a broad smile.

"Well, if so, I won't make any speeches in Georgia," the President shot back in equal good humor.

"If you do," countered George, "I hope they will be on the opposite side from the last time."

The President laughed, seemed to agree that this would be the case, and continued with the discussion of taxes.

'Senator' Hope

ONE THING about film comedian Bob Hope that didn't get into the cable dispatches was how he posed as a U. S. Senator.

It happened while the globe-trotting legislators, led by Senator Richard Russell of Georgia, called at No. 10 Downing st. to chat with Winston Churchill.

As they were being escorted in to meet Churchill, Hope suddenly appeared from nowhere and joined the party. "He might have dropped from the ceiling or popped out of a closet," remarked one Senator. "The first thing we knew, there he was marching in with us."

Hope was introduced to Churchill along with the rest. The Senators nudged each other, exchanged grins. But Ambassador John Winant could see no fun in the performance. After the introductions, Winant grabbed the comedian by his coat lapels and hustled him from the room. Later, the Ambassador told the visiting Senators:

"I still don't know how that actor got in here, but he certainly embarrassed me. I really believe he expected to stay and participate in Mr. Churchill's conference with you gentlemen."

NOTE: How Hope managed to crash the gate is still a mystery, but the other four Senators on the tour are pointing the finger at gregarious Senator "Happy" Chandler of Kentucky, a friend of Hope's who has an actress-daughter in Hollywood.

Diaper Rescuer

SEVERAL million mothers of America probably have to thank Congressman Lansdale Sasscer of Maryland for OPA "Amendment No. 21, Maximum Price Regulation No. 118, effective September 27." To the mothers of America this technical ruling is probably the most important OPA order ever issued. It affects the supply of diapers.

There has been a growing scarcity of three-pointed pants. Textile mills, busy with manufacturing khaki for uniforms and a hundred and one other things for the Army and Navy, have neglected that all-essential infants wear. For one thing it was not very profitable to manufacture diapers in view of the price ceiling.

So the Dy-Dee Wash in College Park, Md., just outside the District of Columbia, appealed to Congresman Sasscer. They proposed that the price ceiling for diapers be fractionally increased, thus giving an incentive to diaper manufacturers.

Congressman Sasscer wrote to OPA Administrator Prentiss Brown as follows:

"With the cold breezes and frost and chill of winter fast approaching, we should be extremely careful at a time when we are trying to preserve the Four Freedoms, that this group in their cradle be spared freedom from want. While the mills may be curtailing production, it does not follow that the stork will do likewise."

Manpower Discarded

THE COAST GUARD has just issued an edict which has Congressmen knitting their brows, in view of the manpower shortage and the drafting of fathers.

Shortly after Pearl Harbor, boatsmen all over the country were urged to volunteer for patrol duty along the Atlantic and Pacific Coasts. Since then many of these private volunteers have been putting in 40 and 50 hours a week in shore patrols. They get nothing out of it, except the satisfaction of helping the war.

However, the Coast Guard has now decided to dispense with this important auxiliary.

One reason is that the Coast Guard is getting all the cutters and other craft it needs through naval channels. But Congressman Magnuson, of Washington, and others don't consider this the answer to the summary release of civilian manpower from further patrol duty. Many of the volunteers, though over-age for the draft, are expert seamen who could continue to be of great service in protecting our shores. An investigation is planned.

Important War Litigation Awaits Decision As Supreme Court Begins New Session Today

By James W. Douthat
Associated Press Staff Writer

With 400 cases already docketed, the Supreme Court will open today its new 1943-44 term that is expected to produce far-reaching decisions on a variety of wartime litigation.

Some of the outstanding cases awaiting action involve the application of the Draft Act to conscientious objectors, the constitutionality of Federal rent control regulations, and the right of a Negro to vote in a State primary which nominates candidates for Congress.

More cases are arriving daily to occupy the court's attention during the next eight months. It has been in recess since June 21.

Membership Unchanged

There has been no change in the membership of the court since last February 15, when Justice Wiley Rutledge succeeded James F. Byrnes, who had resigned to become Economic Stabilization Director.

Only one member of the court—Chief Justice Stone, who will be 71 on October 11—is eligible to retire at full pay because of having reached the age of 70 and having served 10 years on the bench. He still is going strong.

Ranking next in age is 68-year-old Owen J. Roberts, the only member of the tribunal not appointed to his present position by President Roosevelt. Roberts, a Pennsylvania Republican, was named by President Hoover, in 1930.

Court to Have New Crier

One change is in prospect for today's session. There will be a new crier to intone, "Oyez! Oyez! Oyez!" when the justices march into the chamber. He is John A. Kenning, 17 years old, of Germantown, Pa. He succeeds T. Perry Lippitt, 27, who is in the Navy. Lippitt also was assistant marshal.

The program for the session consists only of the admission of attorneys to practice before the tribunal and the receipt of motions. The customary call at the White House at the opening of a new term will take place when an appointment can be arranged.

Several conferences of the justices will be held this week to decide which cases filed during the summer will be reviewed and which will be denied a review. The announcement will be made the following Monday. Oral arguments also will begin then of cases which the tribunal agreed last spring to review.

Msgr. Haas Leaves Racial Committee

Msgr. Francis J. Haas, dean of the school of social science of Catholic University for six years, has resigned the chairmanship of the President's Fair Employment Practices Committee to fill duties as Bishop of Grand Rapids, to which he was appointed last week by Pope Pius XII, it was announced yesterday.

Msgr. Haas had headed the FEPC since last May, investigating instances of racial discrimination in employment. Msgr. Haas first attracted notice in the field of labor and social problems when he served as chairman of the Milwaukee newspaper industry. Later, he was on the advisory board of NRA, and subsequently served on the National Labor Board. When he was appointed chairman of the FEPC, it was estimated that he had helped to settle more than 1500 strikes.

Halifax County Cholera Outbreak Threatens Hogs

South Boston, Oct. 3 (AP).—County Agent C. L. Hall reported that Fairfax County's largest hog population in history is threatened by a serious epidemic of hog cholera and warned that farmers whose hogs die of the disease are required by law to burn or bury the carcasses.

The outbreak, regarded as probably the worst seen in this area, was first noticed about a month ago in the county and subsequently has spread to the Dan River, Cluster Springs and Turbeville communities.

Italian-American Strife

ITALIAN-AMERICANS don't seem to be as united as they might be regarding Italian surrender, if an unusual incident at the convention of Italian-American veterans in Philadelphia is any criterion.

Guest speaker was Dr. Frank Gigliotti of California, secretary of the American Committee for Italian Democracy. This committee, headed by Judge Ferdinand Pecora, has been broadcasting shortwave to Italy, and for some time prior to the Badoglio armistice urged the Italian people to surrender and set up a democratic form of government.

After Dr. Gigliotti addressed the veterans convention, Frank Sacco of Boston rose and began to criticize the committee for Italian democracy. Among other things he said:

"What business is it of yours to broadcast to the Italian people and tell them what to do?"

Obviously Sacco was referring to pleas for surrender. National Commander Tiezo immediately ordered the remarks stricken from the record. Later, in the corridor outside, however, Sacco waxed even more vehement.

"What —— business is it of yours to ask the Italian people to surrender?" he demanded of Dr. Gigliotti.

NOTE: Sacco's apparent views regarding Italian surrender do not represent the great mass of Italo-Americans in the United States. However, there are groups of Italian newspapers in New England and one or two other parts of the country which are being studied carefully in Washington.

A FRIEND you'd like to see more of

The speed with which Mount Vernon moves from the dealers' shelves is proof enough of how many friends this mild and mellow rye has made. Those friends, though, do create a problem. They're calling for more and more Mount Vernon at a time when all that is available comes from stocks laid by before the war.* That's bound to mean it's sometimes hard to find it on your dealer's shelves. We're as sorry about this as you are. But if you'll keep on asking for Mount Vernon, you'll get it—for the dealer who is sold out today may have some in tomorrow. That's the best way to see more of the Bond of Friendship.

Fulbright Resolution Backed by 42 Senators

By the Associated Press

An Associated Press poll shows that of 53 Senators willing to express their views, 42 favor the general principle of the Fulbright "lasting peace" resolution and would support it if they were called upon to vote on the measure as it stands today.

Eleven definitely oppose the measure in its present form, 36 declined to commit themselves and 7 could not be reached for comment.

The Fulbright proposal, passed by a 360 to 29 vote in the House September 21, has been sidetracked in the Senate Foreign Relations Committee but Senator McClellan (Democrat) of Arkansas has announced that he will offer it as a substitute for any other resolution the committee may report out.

Fulbright Resolution

As passed by the House it states:

"Resolved by the House of Representatives (the Senate concurring) that the Congress hereby expresses itself as favoring the creation of appropriate international machinery with power adequate to establish and to maintain a just and lasting peace among the nations of the world, and as favoring participation by the United States therein through its constitutional processes."

Although many Senators seem to feel that they may never have an opportunity to vote on the Fulbright measure in its present form, only seven short of a majority say they favor its general principle.

Would Go Further.

A substantial number of these Senators display a willingness to go much further in making detailed commitments on postwar foreign policies, their general attitude being summed up by Senator Hatch (Democrat) of New Mexico with the comment:

"If that's all we can get, I'm for it, but it isn't strong enough."

On the other hand, several Senators are inclined to agree with Senator Holman (Republican) of Oregon, who told reporters:

"It is a good deal like voting for the Lord's Prayer but I'll vote for it."

Also in the group approving the Fulbright measure in principle are several Republicans who, like Senator Robertson of Wyoming, Capper of Kansas and Wiley of Wisconsin, say they favor the idea but think the statement made by their party's postwar advisory committee at Mackinac Island, Mich., last month is more expressive of their views. This would pledge the United States to "responsible participation . . . in postwar cooperative organization among sovereign nations to prevent military aggression and to maintain permanent peace with organized justice in a free world."

Senator's Opinions

Some, like Senator Bailey (Democrat) of North Carolina, say they favor the principle but look to the Foreign Relations Committee for guidance. Others, like Senator George (Democrat) of Georgia, see "nothing seriously" wrong with the House-approved measure, but doubt that it should be brought up at this time.

The 42 supporters of the resolution include 28 Democrats and 14 Republicans. Five Democrats and six Republicans oppose it in its present form.

The opposition views ranged from a flat statement by Senator Johnson (Republican) of California, that "I'm not for it," to a declaration by Senator Willis (Republican) of Indiana that if the measure reaches the floor he will move to amend it to "specify that no commitments be effective until submitted to the Senate and confirmed by a two-thirds vote."

Wheeler's Objection

Senator Wheeler (Democrat) of Montana, says he thinks the United States should collaborate with other nations to maintain peace, but adds that he is opposed to the United States "being taken over by the British Empire."

Senator Nye (Republican) of North Dakota says no foreign policy statement should be made at this time and Senator Brooks (Republican) of Illinois declares that if the Fulbright proposal were passed "the extreme interventionists would claim to have authority from Congress which they did not get."

American U. Group To See Lawmaking On Capitol Hill

Political science students at American University will undertake "laboratory" work at the Capitol to gain firsthand knowledge of the way legislation is enacted, it was announced yesterday by Dr. Paul F. Douglass, president of the university.

A group of 18 students has arranged with their representatives in Congress to visit Capitol Hill and watch the progress of legislation from the time of its introduction, through committee hearings, on to the time it is enacted or falls by the wayside.

Eight young women in the group have arranged with Senator Joseph H. Ball (Republican) of Minnesota to watch the progress of his efforts to have the Congress adopt some postwar plan.

Zoo's Headkeeper Celebrates 87th Birthday Today

William H. Blackburn, headkeeper of the Washington Zoo, whose solicitous care of animals there during the past 52 years has resulted in breaking a number of longevity records, will celebrate his eighty-seventh birthday today.

Though he has refused interviews for years, Blackburn disclosed yesterday that he intends to "spend the day quietly at home with my wife and let the younger ones look after things at the Zoo."

More than half a century ago, Blackburn crowded 124 birds from the Smithsonian Institution into a wagon and took them to the Zoo. He has been there ever since. He obtained a kangaroo for the Zoo when few persons here had seen this animal in Washington. Having cared for the famous Jumbo for Barnum and Bailey Circus before going to the Zoo, he went to Egypt in 1913 to bring back the big female elephant, Jumbina, displayed here for many years.

Arnold Says Air Power Saved Salerno

By the Associated Press

Seattle, Oct. 3.—Pleading for a greater output of planes, Gen. Henry H. Arnold, commanding general of the United States Army Air Forces, said tonight the Italian invasion "would have been easier with more planes—it could not have been done with less."

General Arnold credited the United States and British air forces with saving "our troops at Salerno," declaring:

"We had to employ every available airplane that our North African force could muster. "We could not have done with less. As a matter of face, we had to gather these planes together from every source possible—from our training centers, from depots, from modifications center—to do the trick.

"Understand me, from my own intelligence sources I know that to be true.

"The task would have been easier with more planes—it could not have been dones with less."

Drive to Recruit Workers

General Arnold spoke at the University of Washington Stadium War Games, held in connection with a drive to recruit 9000 new workers for the Boeing Aircraft Corp. His address was broadcast Nationwide.

The general stressed repeatedly the outstanding quality of the Boeing Flying Fortresses and the everlasting need for more and more of them, and for more production and unslacking effort on the home front. He termed the Fortress "the outstanding heavy bomber of the war . . . a plane praised to the skies by our Allies and damned to hell by our enemies."

Must Be Replaced

Terming the price for victory large, he noted that in the raid on Regensburg, Austria, when 147 forts knocked out the Messerschmitt factory there, 24 of them failed to come home. "Another day, from another raid, 35 failed to return. A week later, 27, and 21, and 16."

"Big numbers," he added. "And they all must be replaced. Right here in Seattle."

Stressing the need for greater home-front production, he said:

"Let me tell you this: Wars are not fought by armies any more. They are fought by nations. Big nations. In our forefather's time it was the man in the field that counted. . . . The outcome depended on the brilliance of the general—and a force could sometimes defeat a large one.

"That is no longer true. It is inconceivable now that a small nation could defeat a large one. War today is, before all else, a test of the productive power of nations. Now a nation fights with all its resources."

Gigantic Expedition Coming

"You can take my word for it," he said, "the gallant fight of the Fifth and Eighth Armies (in Italy) is a small engagement compared to the gigantic expedition which will one day, and we hope not too many months hence, be set against continental Europe.

"An expedition made up of airplanes, bombers, fighters, ships, tanks, guns, and men—thousands, yes, hundreds of thousands of them—streaming onto the continent. It is that expedition which you here in Seattle—and your brother workers in Maryland and California and Kansas and New York and Texas are now launching. . . .

"The big battles are yet to be joined, but when they are joined it will be the army with the extra weight of material that will conquer. The extra gun, the extra ammunition, the extra plane—we must be sure that the extra weight is on our side."

SULFA DRUG COMPOUND BRINGS BATTLE FRONT MIRACLES TO HOMEFRONT

Skin Sufferers Receive New Hope For Painful, Embarrassing Skin Ailments

SULFANILAMIDE was discovered by mistake during the process of developing color-fast dyes, but it was almost 30 years later that chemists discovered its phenomenal power to destroy bacteria. Much has been written about the success of the Sulfa drugs in treatment of pneumonia, scarlet fever, peritonitis and streptoccic throat infections. More recently, news from the battlefronts of the world reach here of the high percentage of lives saved. Wounds on the battlefront can be treated with Sulfa drugs, and the injured men moved back to field hospitals for proper medical care without danger of infection.

Probably one of the most outstanding derivatives of the Sulfa drug, the one which offers relief to the greatest number here on the homefront, the one which can be used safely in every household is Nu-Basic Sulfa Drug Compound, PSO-RIDISAL for the relief of painful, embarassing and stubborn skin diseases.

Clinical tests and thousands of users credit this compound with as dramatic results as those of other Sulfa derivatives . . . particularly with stubborn and long-standing cases of PSORIASIS—an unsightly skin disease that appears on the face, scalp, arms, elbows, hands, fingers, nails, legs, knees and torso.

Similarly amazing results have been attested to by those who suffer with ATHLETE'S FOOT, IMPETIGO, DANDRUFF and ECZEMA.

PSO-RIDISAL is a liquid compound for external use . . . is safe, simple, clean to use. Just rub it on. Each bottle is uniform through laboratory control . . . and is sold only on absolute 14 day money-back guarantee.

If you suffer from an aggravating skin condition you at least owe yourself a test trial with this miracle SULFA DRUG COMPOUND: PSO-RIDISAL But before you order send for our unusually informative booklet describing the treatment and giving you the facts about results. Send 5c in stamps to cover mailing. Nu-Basic Product Co., Dept. E-32, Royal Oak, Mich.

Profile OF A SACRIFICE

THAT'S all there is of Jerry Sloane. The flag he always had in his room; the picture he had taken for Mother's Day; the letters from the induction center . . . from the camp where he got his basic training . . . and with less and less regularity . . . from many places overseas. Then there was that last letter; almost as if he knew what was coming and wanted his folks to know that he had no regrets . . . "no sacrifice is too great," his very words. And the Purple Heart he was awarded is all that will ever come home of Jerry Sloane. PROFILE OF A SACRIFICE.

BUT . . . all this might not have been. You see, Jerry Sloane did not die directly from the bullet that pierced his lung; that could have been removed. He died from the loss of blood. The American Red Cross is doing their job and doing it well, but more and more BLOOD DONORS are needed to prevent new casualties like Jerry Sloane. PROFILE OF YOUR SACRIFICE.

Rumania Eager For Peace, Reports Say

By the Associated Press

Istanbul, Turkey, Oct. 2 (Delayed).—Information today from Rumania is that that Balkan country wants peace badly and is prepared to make what she considers large sacrifices to get out of the war.

She was represented as fearful, however, of destruction of the country by Russia and subjugation to Russia during the armistice period.

The same report said that in the past two months the Germans had made strenuous efforts to get an armistice from Russia, offering the Soviet government domination over the Baltic states, eastern Poland and Bessarabia. It added the Germans thus far have gained no response.

The Rumanians' paramount postwar aim is to regain Transylvania, the rich western province ceded to Rumania by the Allies after the last war but given to Hungary by the Nazis in 1940. Rumania is willing to sacrifice Bessarabia to the Russians and also the neighboring province of Bucovina if necessary. The greatest Rumanian fear is Russian occupation.

Rumania's real ruler is the German minister, Baron Manfred von Killinger. Premier Marshal Ion Antonescu, bound to the Germans by ambition and the fear of losing his position in the event of a break, is for the most part pliant to the Nazis.

It is unlikely Antonescu will dare to try to send more troops into Russia. Rumania still has upward of six divisions in the Crimea and approximately 10 divisions in the Odessa region.

The spearhead of Rumanian opposition to collaboration with Germany is still Juliu Maniu, the peasant party leader, but he is aging rapidly and recently was very ill.

It is doubtful if he is vigorous enough to lead an active revolt but he has a large following of younger men ready to follow his direction.

Constantine Bratianu, leader of the Liberals, a group made up of old aristocratic and industrial leaders, also is still active in opposition.

Both he and Maniu favor settlement with Russia quickly, fearing the effects of a continuation of the war more than Russian occupation. They also are fearful of what the Germans might do to the country in the event Rumania tried to make peace without Germany.

Bulgars Urged to Quit Axis

By the Associated Press

Istanbul, Oct. 3.—A manifesto from the "patriotic front of Bulgaria" which calls upon the Bulgarian people and army to break with the Germans and, on the basis of the Atlantic Charter, to collaborate with other Balkan nations and the United States, Britain and Russia has just been smuggled out of Bulgaria.

The manifesto bears a strong resemblance to the phraseology often used by Bulgaria's 'black radio," presumed to be Soviet-directed, which nightly breaks in on Sofia news broadcasts with advice to Bulgarians to get out of the war. The manifesto, however, is remarkable for its advice to Bulgarians to make friends with the United States and Britain as well as Russia and its indication that Bulgaria's future will be decided within the framework of the Atlantic Charter.

Most important among the manifesto's 12 points were: Prevent Bulgarian entry into Hitler's war; break the Bulgarian alliance with Germany and recall Bulgarian armies fighting against sister states and Serb patriots; restore political rights and freedom of the press; remove control of the army from the fascist clique.

The manifesto said a genuine Bulgarian government must be set up by a constitutional assembly.

This apparently Russian-inspired document seems to indicate that the Soviets will insist on a friendly Sofia government but will not attempt to exclude the United States and Britain from Balkan affairs.

The patriotic front is active but probably is numerically weak and the manifesto therefore is more important as an indication of political trends than as an index to Bulgarian desire to withdraw from the war.

A Bulgarian break with the Axis probably has been delayed by the Italian example which did not prevent war being continued in the surrendered area.

Bushfield to Begin Gallinger Report

Senator Bushfield (Republican) of South Dakota today is slated to begin dictating a report in which he will urge the removal of several of the personnel of Gallinger Hospital.

A general program for the hospital will be recommended in the report which will be compiled jointly by Bushfield and Senators Holman (Republican) of Oregon, chairman of the investigating committee and Buck (Republican) of Delaware.

Inmate Free 28 Yrs. Asks Pardon

Attorney Harold F. Hawken said last night that he would go before the United States pardon attorney today and seek executive clemency for 55-year-old Henry J. Smith, who after 28 years of freedom, has been returned to the District Workhouse at Lorton, Va., to resume a 10-month sentence he began in 1915.

Since his escape after serving five weeks of the sentence, imposed for joyriding, Smith, so far as police records show, has lived a model life. For 9 of the 28 years he was a construction worker and truck driver for the District of Columbia, and was employed by half a dozen ben returned to the District Work-

He joined the Army during the last war under an alias and became a Medical Corps sergeant. Before being given an honorable discharge Smith admitted his false identity and was registered under his proper name by the War Department.

Smith was picked up for investigation last week and fingerprints identified him as the man with the unserved workhouse sentence. The case came to light when Smith wrote a son here asking him to seek the pardon.

The father's last job, according to his letter, was on construction of Camp Spring Airport. He has lived and worked under his real name since the last war.

Danish Jews Are Pouring Into Sweden

Jews arrested included babies and persons to the age of 90. Even a Jewish home for the aged was raided.

German police and military reserves were concentrated along the east coast of Danmark, separated from Sweden only by the narrow sound, to prevent anyone fleeing the country. The Danish news service said the German plan was to place pickets at 100-yard intervals along the coast. Three German transports were anchored off Copenhagen.

Strenuous work on East Front fortifications appeared in prospect for Jewish men and boys.

Jews' Rescue Urged

Dr. Israel Goldstein, president of the Zionist Organization of America, declared yesterday that unless substantial numbers of Jews are rescued from Nazi-occupied nations immediately an Allied victory "will come too late to do the Jewish population any good." He expressed hope that a Jewish commonwealth would be established at the war's end.

Administration Shuns Westerners, Willkie Charges

Reno, Nev, Oct. 3 (AP).—Interviewed at a park bench, Wendell Willkie said today his tour had disclosed that the Western States feel they "are being treated almost like a foreign country by the Federal Government."

There is no reason, he declared, why capable Western men should not have a place in the Federal Administration.

"The one thing that is rebuilding the Republican Party is the outstanding success of Republican Governors," he added, mentioning two Westerners, Gov. Earl Warren of California and Gov. Dwight P. Griswold of Nebraska.

Turning to international problems, the 1940 Republican presidential candidate said his foreign program for the United States includes a "refusal to deal with anti-liberal elements in European countries."

He said that he would amplify this in his October 15 speech at St. Louis.

30 Nazi Divisions Reported in Italy; 20 Held in North

Bern, Switzerland, Oct. 3 (AP).—German forces in Italy at the beginning of October were estimated by the Geneva newspaper La Suisse today at 30 divisions, at least twice the number of troops landed by the Allies.

The paper asserted, however, that the 20 divisions under Field Marshal Edwin Rommel in northern Italy were mired down, and essentially only on garrison duty.

There were three reasons, the paper said, why Rommel's troops could not join Field Marshal Gen. Albert Kesselring's forces in central Italy: First, it would be necessary to open the roads and railroads which lead across the Appenines to central Italy; second, the Germans must be confident that the area where they now are stationed is safe from surprise; and third, daily supplies to the troops would have to be assured.

Opposition Develops

While a bi-partisan bloc began taking form to resist enactment of the full rates, as recommended by the Treasury, for individual and corporate incomes, congressional tax authorities appeared in agreement that excises are due to take a sharp rise.

The Treasury is historically opposed to a Federal retail sales tax, although there appears to be some sentiment in Congress for such a levy in preference to the Administration program.

Capitol Hill heard that the Treasury made some changes in its program since discussing it with leading members of the House Ways and Means and Senate Finance committees. Prior to the appearance of Morgenthau on the Hill today, there were no indications what the changes are.

Animal Memorial Observance to Be Held Today

World Animal Day will be observed today in memory of the manifold contributions by animals to various phases of the war effort.

Dedicated to St. Francis of Assisi, friend and protector of animals, animal day is designed to spread the idea of protection of animals from "such inexcusable human tyrannies as brutal slaughtering and sports, steel-trapping, vivisection, imprisonment and torture in zoos and circuses, and others too numerable to know, according to a statement by Virginia W. Sargent, president of the Animal Protective Association.

Memorial exercises were held yesterday afternoon at Aspen Hill Cemetery for Animals, on Georgia ave. extended, by the Humane Education Society and the National Society for the Humane Regulation of Vivisection.

Orsha and Mogilev also were pounded by Russian airmen ranging ahead of Soviet ground forces converging on those key junctions in White Russia.

The Russians acknowledged fierce German counterattacks in semiencirclement of Gomel, but said these were beaten down. In addition to 1200 enemy troops reported killed in that sector during the day, Moscow said 120 prisoners were taken.

Moscow did not even mention the Caucasus aside from aerial activities, and reported only "reconnaissance and exchanges of artillery fire" along the middle Dneiper Front, where Red armies are massed on the east bank of that broad river opposite the prize cities of Kiev and Dnepropetrovsk.

Berlin, however, continued to tell of heavy fighting along the central Dnieper, the high command declaring its army had "succeeded in further narrowing the enemy bridgehead," inflicting heavy losses on the attacking Red army.

Dnepropetrovsk Fighting

This announcement did not make clear whether the Soviet bridgehead was on the eastern or western bank, but a propaganda broadcast later located the fighting in the Dnepropetrovsk sector, and said that numerous Russian attempts to cross to the western bank had been frustrated.

Berlin broadcasts also indicated 12 Soviet divisions still were attacking in the Zaporozhe sector below Dneipropetrovsk, in an attempt to break through to the mainland approaches to the Crimea.

The fall of Staro-Tamanskaya in the Caucasus left the Germans only a few miles of untenable marches on the peninsula opposite the Crimea. Staro-Tamanskaya is 10 miles across the strait from the Crimean port of Kerch, which already is under Soviet air attacks.

Relatives Claim 2 Elderly Sisters Lost in New York

New York, Oct. 3 (AP).—Two elderly Tampa, Fla., sisters who became separted from their young niece and were found sitting in the rain on a Stuyvesant Park bench last Wednesday night prepared today to leave Bellevue Hospital for Brighton, Mass., with another niece.

The sisters, Emma Jane Lane, 85, and Mrs. Cora Stevens, 77, who had been in the hospital since Thursday night, suffering from exposure, were told yesterday that a nephew, Frank C. Lane of Brighton, would send a niece for them.

The two women became separated from Lillian Lane, 20, at Pennsylvania Station, and the young woman, thinking they had taken a train for Massachusetts, boarded another train for Washington.

Meanwhile, a packetbook, containing $1304, train tickets, ration books and baggage checks, lost by one sister, was to be reclaimed from a Queens County property clerk, where it was taken after it was found.

Nazis Attack Allies on Island of Coo

last Thursday.

(Possible Allied penetration of the Aegean much farther than has been announced officially was seen also in Turkish dispatches which told of reports from steamer passengers that the Greek island of Khios (Chios), midway between the Dodecanese and the Dardanelles, had been occupied by the Allies. The passengers said also that they heard cannonading from the direction of Mytilene (Lesbos), another Greek island 50 miles south of the Dardanelles.

(Previously, refugees from Castelrosso, another of the Dodecanese Islands, said that southermost island of the group also had been occupied by the Allies. There has been no confirmation, however, of this report.)

Enemy Sea Force Is Small

Any sea forces the Germans mustered in the Aegean for today's attack necessarily were small, since they are forced to rely on surface craft captured from the Greeks and Italians or hastily constructed after the occupation of Greece by Germany and her satellites.

Crete, however, 70 miles south of the Greek mainland and little more than 100 miles below Coo, affords excellent air bases for German thrusts at the Allied island positions.

Allied naval forces have been reported in the Aegean Islands from time to time, but the position of German-occupied Crete probably would hold Allied surface activity to hit-and-run operations.

Air activity over the Aegean has grown tremendously in the last months, particularly in raids from Middle East bases by RAF Spitfires and Beaufighters and by medium bombers.

The size of the British forces occupying the islands has not been revealed, but they are believed to be well dug in and probably prepared to meet stiff enemy thrusts. They also have the assistance of the Greek inhabitants and the Italian garrisons which went over to the Allies after the Italian capitulation.

Yugoslavs Rout Nazis

London, Oct. 3 (AP).—While Nazi forces opened a new defensive struggle against the Allies in the Aegean today, other German troops attempting to consolidate their positions along the Adriatic coast in the Balkans were opposed stubbornly by Yugoslav guerillas.

A free Yugoslav radio announcement said the Tenth Herzegovina Brigade had routed a German column advancing on Bilec, in Herzegovina, 25 miles inland from the coastal town of Dubrovnik.

All German thrusts were declared to have been repulsed in the Slovenia sector, where the main fighting is raging along the railway from Ljubljana to Italian Trieste, 90 miles to the northeast.

The broadcast credited a Croat patriot corps with routing a Nazi motorized column attempting to reinforce the German garrison at Split—Adriatic port evacuated by the Yugoslavs Friday after bitter fighting.

Other Yugoslav forces were reported to be heavily engaging Nazi forces near the northern Italian communication center of Gorizia, and also near Split.

Radio France at Algiers reported Allied ships now are supplying patriot forces along the Dalmatian coast with food and ammunition.

Parley Location To Be Made Soon

Once the meeting place is agreed on, diplomatic sources say, agreement on the time of the conference should be a relatively simple matter.

The behind-the-scene see-saw pull between Moscow and London has been going on for about three weeks. Unless resolved soon, it may upset the timing of the subsequent conference among President Roosevelt, Prime Minister Churchill and Marshal Stalin.

This is one of the main reasons why the negotiations are now being rushed to conclusion.

Hill Will Attack Plan to Draft Fathers by Age Groups

been given an outline of the plan have indicated dislike for its provisions, and some leaders have declared Congress would not approve an increase of more than four billions in the taxpayers' load.

5. Increased allotments and allowances for the dependents of men in the armed services were due to be recommended by the House Military Committee on a scale more generous, on the whole, than those voted by the Senate in July.

6. Resumption of the struggle between President Roosevelt and the farm bloc over the Administration's program for payment of subsidies to hold down retail food prices appeared inevitable, as the Chief Executive prepared a special message to Congress on the food situation.

While defeat of the Wheeler father-draft measure was anticipated, the Senate has before it not only the Taft-authored substitute, but also another one by Senators Bailey and Bennett Clark intended to take out of Government employment and into the armed service able-bodied nonfathers between the age of 18 and 38. The Bailey-Clark proposal appeared to have best chances of approval. It would be followed, under the authors' plans, by concerted efforts to channel more able-bodied young single men from industry into the Army and Navy.

Hill Takes Stand

Criticizing the Taft proposal to draft available fathers by age groups, Senator Hill last night told International News Service:

"The military and naval forces will need men in the entire age range of 18 to 38. There should be no interference with the authority of the local boards to consider their lists of available as a whole.

"Being neighbors of the registrants and familiar with the circumstances of each one, the boards are in a position to follow a policy of calling up men in the order in which their withdrawal from civilian life will be the most advantageous for the war effort as a whole.

"Under the Taft amendment the local boards would be required to exhaust their reserviors of married men under 25 years old before they could go into the next category.

"Suppose the case of a married man 24 years old with three children and one across the street 26 years old with only one child. Plainly, with other factors being equal, it would be wiser to take the 26-year-old man.

"From a military viewpoint it would not be wise to limit the inductions according to age. The Army does not want all of the younger men at one time. Considering the war from a long-range viewpoint the Army must have flexibility of choice in assignment of fathers so that it can consider those who are more suitable for limited service at the time it considers those fit for combat."

While some fears had been expressed that a full-scale debate on postwar relations might bring criticism of some policies pursued by some of the Allied governments, Administration officials more recently have indicated that they have no great objection to such an airing of views.

The four Senators who have returned from the tour of battle fronts, Russell (Democrat) of Georgia, Mead (Democrat) of New York, Lodge (Republican) of Massachusetts and Brewster (Republican) of Maine, already have criticized American failure to obtain postwar landing rights on any of the widely scattered airfields built with American money, and have called on Great Britain to supply from her fields along the Persian Gulf a larger proportion of the oil needed for the united war effort, thereby saving some of the long haul of American petroleum products.

With defeat of any prohibition on the drafting of fathers apparently in sight, quick action was expected on boosting the allowance and allotments of men in the service.

How to Make Cooking Fats Do Double Duty!

OF COURSE YOU CAN! There's no conflict between rationing and saving your used cooking grease to make gunpowder for our men at the front. And the reasons are very simple. First, the government doesn't ask for your fats until you've got all the cooking good out of them. And, second, even if you consume a lot of them in using them over, what you have left is vitally important. No housewife need think she has too little to turn in! Because just one simple tablespoon of used fat will make five machine gun bullets. Save every precious drop. Keep it in a can. When full, rush it to your meat dealer.

U-Boats Return

It was to be expected that German undersea warfare would be resumed with fresh vigor and violence. The lull of the past four months, during which the U-boats were virtually driven from the Atlantic and Allied shipping moved unscathed, could portend only some new Nazi deviltry. For the enemy cannot abandon attempts to cut the lifeline between Europe and the United States without accepting defeat as inevitable. The Battle of the Atlantic is one of the truly decisive battles of the war.

Germany appears to have returned to this battle with improved tactics and weapons. It is reported that her submarines are now equipped with a new type of magnetic torpedo capable of overtaking a surface vessel and detonating in response to its propeller vibrations, thus disabling the ship and making her an easy target for an ordinary torpedo. The device is unquestionably ingenious and formidable. How effective it will prove against well-protected convoys prepared to meet its threat remains to be seen. Apparently it has already caused some havoc in our Atlantic shipping.

This new weapon is not likely, however, to alter radically the essential nature of the sea struggle. U-boats continue to be vulnerable to depth charges from destroyers and to bombs from airplanes. The resumption of the enemy attacks serves only to remind us that our own part in the battle must be waged with relentless vigilance. From our point of view, too, it is a crucial test of strength. The movement of men and supplies to the European fighting fronts must grow in speed and volume. Whatever tricks the Nazi submarines may devise, our job is to keep them below the surface of the ocean—to scotch these sea snakes before they are able to strike.

Freedom Of The Air

President Roosevelt has given all the assurance he can give that "we will have a free air" after the war. Every forward-looking American will hope that this objective can be realized. Nothing short of free movement of postwar air traffic would be compatible with the great struggle that is now being made to free the world from domination by tyrants seeking to turn all commerce to the advantage of themselves and their followers. In short, freedom of the air ranks high among many important freedoms that the United Nations must establish in the place of Hitlerism.

Freedom of the air will not be attained, however, merely by talking about it, or for that matter by agreement between President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill. Indeed, there is no such thing as abstract freedom, as we have learned for ourselves in two wars with respect to freedom of the seas. Freedom can exist only when order and force have been established to protect it and give it more than theoretical meaning. So we must start our thinking about freedom of the air by recognizing the fact that it will be wholly contingent upon organization of world powers to keep the peace.

Discussions with our Allies as to the future of air traffic ought to begin, then, with military aviation rather than commercial aviation. The strongest powers in the world of tomorrow will be those which can mobilize the greatest and hardest-hitting air forces. If these armadas of the skies are used through international agreement to keep the peace, commercial traffic by air can flourish to the four corners of the earth. But if each country must rely upon its own military strength to protect itself against aggression, every proposal to establish international air lines will necessarily arouse suspicion, and strong resistance to anything approaching free movement of air traffic will be inevitable.

To launch any specific plans for international postwar aviation now, therefore, would be to put the cart before the horse. For the present all aviation has been diverted to war use and the commander on every front is calling for more and more planes. Our offensive in Italy, for example, might have moved a good deal faster than it has if General Eisenhower had had more transport planes to move men and equipment to the new bases his troops have taken. Everyone knows that the entire output of our airplane factories, transport as well as fighting craft, must for the present go into war use. And even after the war is over we shall need an agreement on the use of air bases and planes to keep the peace before there will be much point in settling down to negotiate freedom of the air for commercial traffic.

Japan And Java

The Japanese, having "liberated" the natives of the East Indies from Dutch rule, are now trying to win them over to participation in the Greater East Asia Coprosperity Sphere. The degree to which they succeed cannot fail to have an important bearing on their ability to retain military control in this area. For if the Indonesians choose to support Japan, our own task in recapturing their islands will be rendered vastly more difficult.

The Japanese technique has been to extend a gloved hand of friendship. Thus far, at least, there have been few signs of any native disposition to trust the Japanese even when bearing gifts. In the case of Java, to which Japan has recently offered a form of "independence," the gifts seem illusory indeed. The Japanese military authorities in Java have decided to establish a central council of 43 members and a number of regional councils to help the military govern the occupied island. The catch in this scheme is that 23 members of the central council will be "appointed directly by the supreme commander of the Japanese forces." How great a degree of independence this will actually confer upon the Javanese can be gauged from the fact that the military overlords will also appoint several advisers to the council, which itself will have only advisory functions. And just to avoid taking any chances it has been decreed that Japanese will be the official language of the council.

This arrangement falls far short of the degree of self-government enjoyed by Java under Dutch rule. Before the Japanese invaded the Netherlands Indies, the people there had a legislative body known as the Volksraad, with 60 members, 38 of whom were popularly elected, and with full legislative powers over internal affairs. Its decisions were subject to the veto power of a governor general, but this was exercised on no more than a few occasions. That the Javanese will now be cajoled by what is in fact only a shadow of their former rights seems altogether unlikely.

But it is not probable, on the other hand, that they will be eager for a return to Dutch authority—unless that authority affords them some real assurance of increased autonomy and economic advancement. In some respects the Dutch have been the most enlightened of all the colonial powers. In the Indies they have shown racial tolerance, have protected the land ownership of the Indonesians and have undertaken measures for the promotion of health and education. Nevertheless, only about 5 per cent of the Indonesians had achieved literacy by the time of the Japanese invasion. The system of representative government developed in the last 25 years was based on an electoral process so indirect and limited that it left much to be desired from a democratic point of view. The large rubber, oil, sugar and other commercial interests were the real governing powers in the Indies.

About a year ago Queen Wilhelmina announced a plan for complete autonomy in all the Netherlands overseas territories once they have been recovered from Japan. But autonomy can become meaningful to colonial dependencies only if it is accompanied by concrete measures to prepare them for the acceptance of its responsibilities. This entails a rapid expansion of popular education and assistance in economic development which will amount to something more constructive than mere exploitation. Any restoration of Western sovereignty in the Far East must be in the nature of a trusteeship. The Dutch can advance the cause of the United Nations by letting the Indonesians know that they understand this and mean to shape their postwar policies accordingly.

Year Of Price Control

After a year of operation under the Stabilization Act, Messrs. Vinson, Brown and Davis agree that the controls established to prevent price and wage inflation have held fairly well, although they hasten to add that the battle is far from being won. As a matter of fact, the battle against inflation never can be won, because inflation is an enemy that can be conquered only by unremitting vigilance.

In view of the handicaps under which the OPA has functioned, it is deserving of praise for having limited or helped to limit the general advance in prices to 12 per cent during the 19 months following our entry into the war. Compared with a price increase of 29.5 per cent in the corresponding period of our participation in World War I, the record is extremely creditable.

The WLB likewise merits commendation for holding the line against advances in basic wage rates, though it did not, because it could not, prevent advances in pay resulting from time-and-a-half rates for overtime. The lengthening of the working week has forced up unit wage costs and exerted pressure on prices because of these penalty overtime rates. In fact, extra pay for overtime work on any basis puts more money in wage earners' pockets and makes the struggle against inflation all the more severe.

On the wage front, therefore, in spite of WLB's efforts, the situation remains critical. Prices have been kept from soaring not because of the wage policies that have been followed, but because for one reason or another such as scarcity of goods, rationing controls, investment in war bonds and possibly inertia, money has not been spent as earned. Cash has piled up rapidly in consumer hands. As long as it remains there, Messrs. Vinson, Brown and Davis will be able to chalk up good marks for themselves. If, for any reason or no reason, the people set out to spend what they have earned, thereby speeding up the velocity of circulation of money, it will be a sad day for all three officials and the country also.

Court Quorum

The judicial term upon which the Supreme Court commences today will bring a number of significant cases up for review. Operations of important war agencies of the Government, including the Selective Service System and the Office of Price Administration, will be submitted for judgment. In addition the docket contains several pleas involving questions of minority rights. War time pressures inevitably place strains upon our ordinary legal processes and give rise to questions centering round the exercise of extraordinary governmental powers. The decisions of the Supreme Court are never more essential or urgent than in such a time as this.

Yet the Court is handicapped in the discharge of its obligations by the antiquated law which stipulates that no fewer than six of its justices are required to constitute a quorum. This requirement has remained in effect since the days when the Court had 10 members. Now that it has only nine, a quorum could reasonably consist of a simple majority of five justices. Such a change has been proposed in legislation introduced by Representative Hatton Sumners, chairman of the House Judiciary Committee. Chief Justice Stone testified last spring to the fact that some change is necessary if the Court is to dispose of two important cases on which it has been unable to take action because of inability to secure a quorum of six.

These cases concern application of the antitrust laws to the Aluminum Co. of America and application of the "death sentence" provision of the Utility Holding Company Act to the North American Co. Four justices have disqualified themselves from acting in these cases because they had connections with them before ascending the bench. Since the Court now has three former Attorneys General and one Solicitor General in its membership it is entirely possible that these justices will feel impelled to disqualify themselves from other litigation for the same reason.

Such inability of the Court to act amounts to a frustration of justice. The remedy is simple and logical. Congress should act promptly to give the Supreme Court the relief prescribed by Congressman Sumners. This would enable the Court to dispose of the old problems inherited from past terms and to avoid new dilemmas of the same sort in the future. There can be no reasonable question as to the validity of judicial proceedings conducted before five justices.

Selective Father Draft

There is a profound difference in spirit and purpose between Senator Wheeler's bill to ban the drafting of prewar fathers before January and the substitute proposal introduced by Senator Taft last week on behalf of a bipartisan Senate group. A majority in the Senate appears to be convinced that the size of the Army should be determined by the military authorities. If Senator Wheeler's proposed ban were to become effective, the Army maintains that it could not obtain the number of men it requires. No similar objections can be raised against the Taft plan that merely seeks to make the selection of recruits more selective without absolutely prohibiting the drafting of any group of men required to meet Army demands.

The proposal to call all fathers under 30 before drafting older men and to require Selective Service approval of occupational deferment for workers under 30 would reduce the number of drafted men with heavy family responsibilities to a minimum. Since age is of prime importance in distinguishing between men with a large number of dependents and those with none or only a few dependents, we conclude that age classifications provide a very reasonable basis for compromising the controversy over the drafting of fathers.

GIRL READING DICKENS

Spring Branch is washed in a prime coat of yellow
Now mornings are golden and high noon, mellow,
But Pauline, high in a bronze nut tree,
Is tangible tranquillity.

Light as mottled as leopard-skin
Is covering her from toe to chin.
She does not see Frost, grizzled and bowed
As he calls, "Sook-ee" till the brown pigs crowd

Pushing and squealing before their trough,
Nor Jube's swinging fork as the hay slides off.
Spring Branch is just home though the half-grown chickens
Are yellow as meal. Pauline's reading Dickens.

She does not notice that house and stable
Cast shadows as black as the Age of Fable,
Nor that window-panes hold flames that flutter
And are the color of new churned butter.

When Chestnut passes, his white breath steams
From flared brown nostrils in twin, white streams,
But Pauline is warm for old pages turning
Hold the crisp, dry crackle of nut leaves burning.

Shifting Alliances

By Mark Sullivan

Pattern of Change

ITALY is being made a formal cobelligerent of the Allies. Her government, her navy, and part of her army are already cooperating with the British and Americans. This is a landmark.

Two years ago next month, this column printed some words which are here repeated. The words are repeated because they illustrate a characteristic of this global war. They may guide the reader toward finding some kind of pattern beneath it all. The words, printed on November 10, 1941, were:

"Who will bet that in the final stage of this war, Italy will still be fighting alongside Hitler? Italy has had two roles already, first a neutral then a Hitler ally. . . . Before it is all over, she may complete the circle by being where she has so often been in history, the friend of England."

TODAY that prediction is fulfilled. Since the war began Italy has had three positions—neutral, ally of Hitler, ally of the United Nations. While this example is conspicious, it does not stand alone. During this war, Finland has been first a neutral, then fighting under circumstances approved by Britain and the United States, later an ally of Hitler. France has been first an ally of Britain, later her government, if not her people, cooperated with Hitler, still later the French North African army joined Britain and the United States. Russia has been first a neutral, having a nonaggression treaty with Germany, later fighting against Germany; and Russia is still a neutral as respects Japan, having a nonaggression pact running until 1946.

Nor are these shiftings ended. It is likely that within a few months some of the Balkan countries, now satellites of Hitler, will abandon that allegiance and unite with Russia against Hitler. Turkey, until now neutral, is likely sooner or later to join the United Nations. Yet other shiftings are likely.

What does it all add up to? We can at least say that it enables us to recognize a parallel in history.

THE PARALLEL is with the Napoleonic wars. The parallel is remarkable and a little discomforting. For, if history were to repeat itself fully, it would disappoint those who confidently expect that the present war will end in a matter of months, and that universal peace will follow. The Napoleonic wars—with frequent shiftings of nations, and little lulls of partial peace—lasted some 20 years.

From 1792 to 1814, practically every nation and principality in Europe was at war at one time or another, many at war several different times. The whole period was a welter of war.

The characteristic that makes the Napoleonic period have some resemblance to the present, was the strange and frequent changing of alignments. Nations fought first against Napoleon, then on his side, or vice versa. Nations united in coalitions for war against Napoleon—but at the same time were at war with each other. Nations fought for a few years, made peace, kept the peace a few months or years, then fought again. There were four peace treaties between Napoleon and Austria.

Throughout all, there was one nation that stood firm and resolute, uncompromising and unconquerable. Other nations fought Napoleon a while, but grew tired or were beaten; when they were ready to fight again, England was there, the ever dependable rock of resistance to the conqueror.

SO IT IS IN THIS WAR. After France fell in 1940, Britain stood alone as an effective fighting opponent of the Axis. She remained alone until Russia was brought into the war by Hitler's attack upon her in June, 1941, followed by our entrance after Japan attacked us in December, 1941.

Britain saw nation after nation fall to Hitler, by conquest or assent, willing or unwilling, until practically every nation in Europe, 15 in all—all except Switzerland, Portugal and Sweden, and European Russia—were in the Nazi tentacles. Today England begins to see the slow unwinding of that tragic coil. Italy has come back to England's side. A French army fights alongside the British and Americans in the Mediterranean. Greece and Yugoslavia are in sight of redemption. Other Balkan countries, satellites of Hitler, await the day when they can throw off his yoke.

There is no convincing reason to fear interruption of this process, nor to fear that the present war will last as long as the Napoleonic ones. Hitler, with all his cunning and ruthlessness, has neither the genius nor staying power of Napoleon. The conquest of Hitler should be possible within a year. Thereafter, Britain and the United States will be free to throw their combined weight with China against Japan.

Delayed News

Winston Churchill told Parliament that no ships have been sunk in the North Atlantic for four months and none at all in the last two weeks. We Americans received the news from 3000 miles away! Hadn't Washington heard of it?

The Adriatic

By Paul Schubert

Shipping Route

WHILE THE hard fight for Naples was going on, British components of the invasion of Italy were moving up the Italian coast with decisive swiftness. With the fall of Foggia, the first phase of the invasion was successfully ended.

Foggia was in ruins as the Eighth Army entered the city. It had been heavily bombed for weeks—what remained was probably demolished by the Germans before they evacuated. Pressure on Foggia had been so great that the enemy had long ceased using it as an air base. It is notable that this aerial stronghold was virtually undefended by air power, partly because of the German air inferiority which has seemed apparent in the Mediterranean theater for months, partly because the Germans were unable to make good the damage to the Foggia airdrome complex.

Under the cover of our own air power, however, and screened by the further advance of the Eighth Army, it will be surprising if Allied engineer forces do not have Foggia working again as a major air base within a relatively stort time.

The Germans have been treating the Italian campaign as a campaign in ground warfare. They have fought hard for Naples as they fought around Catania in Sicily. With artillery, tanks and infantry they slug it out—it looks as though they would be content to fight on in this way for months to come.

Our strategy in Italy, however, appears to be one of air power—it's impossible to escape the feeling that we were more interested in Foggia than we were in Naples.

NAPLES, TO be sure, is a seaport of entry. But we already have good seaports of entry into the Italian peninsula, at Taranto, Brindisi and Bari. And though we shall unquestionably use Naples, the campaign doesn't hang on Naples.

A seaport in which we may be far more interested is Trieste, at the head of the Adriatic.

The capture of Foggia bears on our ability to take Trieste.

The Adriatic Sea is the back door to Europe. It is the most direct route to middle and southeastern Europe. Trieste was the principal seaport of the old Austrian Empire—it is linked to Vienna, Prague, Budapest and other middle-European cities by good direct rail connections. Trieste is linked to the outer world by the fact that deep-sea shipping can steam out through the Adriatic into the Mediterranean and thence to Liverpool, New York, Buenos Aires—all the world's great harbors.

There are other Adriatic seaports with direct rail connection to the railway network of southeast Europe. Venice is one of them—for many centuries Venice was the principal harbor of the Middle Seas. Fiume-Susak has a rail link to Zagreb, which is on the Yugoslav portion of the Balkan Express main line. Split is the terminus of another branch of the rail link to Zagreb. Dubrovnik is also a port of entry, though less important today than it was in medieval times when, as Ragusa, it was the home port of the "Argosies" (a corruption of the word Ragusa, used to denote a rich trading ship).

We have two things to gain by entering Europe at the head of the Adriatic.

FIRSTLY, THE direct stroke north toward Vienna, is a highly embarrassing thrust at the rear of the enemy's European fortress defenses.

Let us assume that if we delivered this stroke on the ground, we should meet very stubborn opposition, since the enemy thinks in terms of ground warfare, and has made his plans to meet attack of this nature.

We have an alternative, however. We can deliver our stroke by the medium of air power—and perhaps make it more effective in that way.

Our second great gain in entering Europe at the head of the Ardiatic is the fact that we thus immediately menace the main rail connection south out of Europe to Athens and Istanbul—the Balkan Express route.

This route is all-important to Germany's ability to maintain combat forces in Greece and Bulgaria. Apart from the Danube Valley route to the Black Sea, it is the only freight-artery capable of carrying heavy traffic into the Balkans—and at that its capacity is limited, particularly during the winter months.

Should we drive inland from Trieste to Zagreb, Germany's ability to hold Athens and Sofia becomes very questionable.

Our ability to invade Europe by way of the Adriatic depends on our ability to provide air cover for the naval movements of invasion and supply.

Bases like Foggia are the key to that air cover.

Draft Showdown

In a critical war industry a key man is acknowledged as a cog in war production and the employer will stand up and fight for his status as an essential cog. Not so in Government . . . regardless of value, political repercussions are feared . . . justice is done only when "it won't look bad."

If a Government war agency job is important enough to warrant pleas that a man stay on the job for the good of the war effort, and not transfer to industry, it should be important enough for that man to receive the same consideration that he would get in industry when his draft status comes up for change . . . and it should be uniformly regarded as such by local boards. In other words . . . is or is not a Government war agency a necessary industry? Why is that question never answered in a direct, consistent and courageous manner? M. P.

Bladensburg, Md., Sept. 30.

More Taxes

Funds are needed for the war effort. Yes, but Mr. Morgenthau and his henchmen might try adding more tax to the higher tax bracket payers than to the lowest. We barely have enough now to meet expenses. Whereas most of those in favor of heavier taxes, especially for the small-salaried person, are those who own municipal bonds on which interest and income are completely tax-exempt.

M. R. TUCKER.
Washington, Sept. 30.

Bituminous Coal

Recently you have made reference in your editorials to the importance of bituminous coal in the war effort. It is true that coal alone will not win the war, but it also is a fact that we can lose the war without ample bituminous coal.

May I, therefore, call your attention to the outstanding job the bituminous coal industry has been performing. Without public fanfare or Army-Navy E awards, the industry has been creating all-time production records as its part in turning out the guns, tanks, planes and ships in the quantities needed to win the war.

The bituminous coal industry is proud of establishing an all-time production record of 580 million tons in 1942. This was attained despite the loss of 50,000 miners to the armed forces and another 20,000 men to other war industries. In fact, the production of 580 million tons was gained with 155,305 fewer men than when the previous record of 379,385,820 tons was made in 1918.

Bituminous coal serves the war effort in more ways than turning out the steel for guns, ships, tanks and planes. Many of the basic ingredients of explosives, plastics, dye and dyestuffs, pharmaceuticals, photographic chemicals, industrial solvents and other important war materials are derived from coal by way of the by-products coke industry. The total of their contribution to the war is enormous. Bituminous coal also drives 9 out of every 10 railroad locomotives, creates 55 per cent of all electric power used in this country, heats 4 out of 7 homes and has 60 million customers.

Average Intelligence

A writer to the paper signing himself "Marine" asks Congress to "wake up" with regard to the many domestic problems which are vital to the war program and to the postwar peace.

He says he is writing for his buddies, Marines "who seldom read beyond the sports pages of the newspapers" but who are nevertheless "fed up" with the stalling of Congress.

This writer should know that it is the vast multitude of so-called Americans who "never read beyond the sports pages" that are largely responsible for the kind of Congress we have. As Albert Einstein is reported to have put it, "In a democracy the average intelligence has to be above the average, if it is to work." It is evident that Americans do not meet the test of ability to govern themselves. Being a soldier and seeing the horrors of war at first hand never gives a man any conception of what political or economic measures will prevent war, any more than being afflicted with a cancer enables you to prescribe the remedy. Junketing Trips

Some of us are wondering why if Gen. MacArthur is begging for planes and more planes—those we have and the newest models always seem to be available for civilian junketing trips—usually such trips have political value or are just to satisfy a whim. Let them stay home, as they are constantly telling the rest of us to do. J. Mc.

Wasteful Residents

Will you kindly explain to the residents of this city that not to segregate paper from garbage is wasteful and unpatriotic and to throw away perfectly good fat drippings is the work of a traitor?

I have seen these things in our garbage well (which is used by three other families) and I am greatly shocked. M. L. C.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

His Turn

There's laughter in the offing;
Those chuckles that you hear—
Those guffaws in the distance—
That ha-ha ringing clear—
Are full of satisfaction;
Gone is all trace of blues,
As Emperor Selassie
Digests the battle news.

II

A horse-laugh comes resounding
Across the lands and seas;
The last laugh is the best one
By all the old decrees;
And somehow this one stirs us
And makes us shout "hey! hey!"
As Haile reads the war news
That's rolling in today.

III

A giggle most infectious—
A grin from ear to ear—
A shaking of his tummy—
And now and then a jeer
From 'neath a gay umbrella
With color tones galore,
As Haile, King of Judah,
Observes the tides of war.

IV

We hear the merry ha-ha,
We get the wild tee-hee
That breaks right through the quiet
And inbred dignity;
Oh, boy, of all the laughter
This one is tops, I know,
When Haile gets the late news
Upon his radio!

* * * *

Two German spies, men who sneaked into our home defense setup as air raid wardens, watched troopship movements and sent messages to the enemy, were let off with prison terms the other day. The court ruled that, inasmuch as the messages did not get through, it could not give the pair the works. This reasoning eludes this correspondent. Is a spy and a traitor a spy and a traitor only when he really murders American boys?

Jealousy

I envy guys who hunt and fish:
They need no points to get their dish;
They point a gun . . . it goes "bang! bang!";
This tells the ration board go hang.

Dizzy Dean has been rejected for air service because of physical disabilities. But we still think there is a place for him in nonmilitary service. What a man he would be to use in talking back to Mussolini and Hitler!

The more we think of Marshall Field getting 70 million dollars the more we pity him. There was apparently no way out. Mr. Field had to take the money. The will said so, and he couldn't break it. The it was, 70 million dollars at his door on the delivery date, and nothing his lawyers could do could save him!

Anybody who had made a few hundred dollars extra in a year can understand all the trouble, worry and apprehension involved when one has to take millions. Ah, the tears and heartbreaks!

We can imagine Mr. Field just starting to figure out how much of that must go out in taxes. We can see him surrounded by accountants, lawyers, rapid calculators and first-aid workers, obliged to wade through it all. Seventy million dollars! Some wading!

Fifth Freedom

The four freedoms will have little value unless American citizens are guaranteed another freedom—namely, free individual enterprise. Freedom from want and freedom from fear can never be fully realized in this present world, for the Saviour of sinners said: "Ye have the poor always with you."

The one freedom above all other freedoms which will help to minimize the necessity of want and of fear is free private enterprise. As long as the Government interferes with private enterprise by entering into competitive business with private concerns, the people are going to suffer from want and fear. The Government is tax free; private business is taxed from 40 to 80 per cent of its net earnings. Such a system of government will soon wipe out all free enterprise. Such a system builds up and strengthns bureaucratic government to the extent where Government officials become the masters of the people instead of the servants of the people.

During a war emergency it becomes necessary to have a certain amount of bureaucratic government in order to prosecute the war successfully and to centralize more power in the Chief Executive as Commander in Chief. He necessarily must delegate some of his powers to bureaus. We all concede that much, but that is no justification for bureaucratic government in peacetime.

The right to work and enjoy the fruit of one's own labors is a divine right and it should be sacredly guarded. When the common laboring man is compelled to pay from $25 to $100 for the privilege to work, at the dictates of labor racketeers, or lose his job under the approval of the Federal Government, American citizens are not delivered from fear and want. Such connivance on the part of the Federal Government with labor racketeers is destructive not only of free government but of free enterprise, and the right to work unmolested.

Editorial Victory

Congress Responds To The Press

LINDLEY

THE RESIGNATION of Representative Eugene E. Cox as chairman and a member of the select committee of the House to investigate the Federal Communications Commission appears to have received less attention in the Nation as a whole than it deserves. It was, of course, an important victory for good government—or, rather, over bad government. It rescued the Speaker of the House and its membership as a whole from an indefensible position.

But most of the press dispatches and editorial comments I have seen on the resignation ignore the means by which it was brought about. This is surprising, since the resignation was a clearcut victory for constructive journalism. It was the work of a few courageous newspapers, unsupported by either political party and with little help from any other quarter.

The reasons why Cox should not have been permitted to serve as a member of this committee were so compelling that it will be hard for even the most benevolent apologists for the House to explain why even one editorial remonstrance was necessary to force his resignation or removal. The FCC had presented evidence that Cox had received a fee of $2500 for legal services rendered to a private client before the FCC. If true, this was a crime. Last May Mr. Clifford J. Durr, a member of the FCC, petitioned the House, through the Speaker, to disqualify Cox as a member of the committee "because of his bias and personal interest." The Speaker referred the petition to the Judiciary Committee, which finally reported on September 18 that the matter lay outside its jurisdiction.

THE SITUATION was complicated superficially by the failure of the Department of Justice to lay the evidence concerning Cox's fee before the grand jury. An indictment so often has been used unfairly as a political weapon that the Department of Justice should be absolutely sure of its case before proceeding against a member of the coordinate branch of the Government. But there was reason to surmise that it hesitated chiefly because such a proceeding might be considered an affront to the Speaker and the membership of the House who were standing back of Cox.

Even if Cox did not commit a crime—if it should be established, for example, that the fee he received was for legal services not connected with the FCC or any other agency of the Federal Government—the obvious fact remained that he was unfitted to conduct a fair inquiry into the agency which had supplied the evidence to support this serious charge. This has been more than proved by the methods by which the investigation has been conducted.

The House was thus doubly brought into disrepute—by the retention of Cox as a member of the investigating committee in the face of a serious charge against his integrity, and by the conduct of the investigation, under his direction, as a grudge fight in a way which Mr. Eugene Meyer, editor and publisher of The Washington Post, described as "a mockery of basic American traditions of fair play . . . a star chamber . . . black with bias."

BUT IN THE POLITICAL WORLD, hardly a voice was raised in protest. The House was being criticized on so many grounds last spring that its members had acquired almost belligerently defensive reactions. They found difficulty in distinguishing between the criticisms occasioned by their poor legislative record and this one, which involved the honor of the House and public confidence in the integrity of the national legislature. Naturally there was reluctance to take any action which might be construed as an informal verdict that a member was guilty of a crime which had not yet been established by the usual judicial processes.

But neither the Democratic nor the Republican leadership in the House or anywhere else took a step toward protecting or redeeming the reputation of the lower half of the national legislature. If newspapers were no more than channels of information about daily events, almost certainly nothing would have happened. The case for the removal or resignation of Cox was brought to the attention of the public by newspapers serving as active guardians of the public interest. It was presented chiefly through the editorial columns of the New York Post, PM, and The Washington Post. Some other editorial pages and columnists chimed in, but these three opened the fight and kept it up. Altogether they do not reach a large percentage of the American people—and the two New York papers go chiefly to left-wing liberal readers whose political influence in Congress is limited. But the case was so clear that it could not be effectively answered and knowledge of the facts was gradually spreading over a wider area.

THE WASHINGTON POST ran 17 editorials on the subject—each one carefully and temperately argued. The seventeenth almost certainly was the missive which finally brought about Cox's resignation from the committee. This was an open letter to the Speaker signed by Eugene Meyer, and published on the front page—succinctly reviewing the essential facts and calling upon the Speaker and other legislators of integrity and good will to rise to their plain duty. This appeared on September 27. Cox resigned on the 30th.

Two question now remain: (1) Whether the methods and hired personnel of the investigating committee will be revised. (A better solution would be to disband the select committee and turn the investigation over to the appropriate regular committee of the House.) (2) Whether the Department of Justice will lay the Cox case before a grand jury.

Constructive journalism has already forced the first step in correcting a grievous error—one which rightfully impaired public confidence in the lower half of the national legislature and which, if left uncorrected, might have damaged it irreparably for years to come.

Russia Hoping to Outdo World In Production, Survey Finds

By the Associated Press

New York, Oct. 3.—The Twentieth Century Fund in a survey released today said postwar plans of Soviet Russia were concentrated on development of industry, agriculture and internal resources with the avowed goal of leading the world in per capita production of many basic necessities and consumer goods.

The fund, established and endowed by the late Edward A. Filene for economic research, said China planned an extensive program of modernization and industrialization to raise the living standards of her people.

The fund has been surveying postwar plans of the United Nations.

The report said Russian long-range plans were based on the last prewar meeting of the all-union conference of the Communist Party in February, 1941, at which the Soviet State Planning Commission was asked to draw up a 15-year plan designed "to surpass the most advanced capitalist countries in per capita production of iron, steel, fuel, electric machines and consumer goods."

But, said the survey, the Nazi invasion of Russia in June of 1941, "destroyed a large part of what the Russians had built up with so much pain and at the cost of great privation since 1928."

Some of this havoc was balanced, said the report, by the accelerated economic growth of the Asiatic regions of the Soviet Union which has "compensated to some extent for the destruction in European Russia."

China's plan to raise living standards was based on principles outlined by Dr. Sun Yat-sen, and she looked to this country for the most help the report said. "The amount of credits that China can use has been estimated in billions of dollars," the fund report stated.

"The key to the further development of Socialism and to the realization of Communism in Russia, according to Soviet spokesmen, is the technical progress of the country," the report said.

"The development of mechanical, chemical and electrical power and of technical proficiency in industry, agriculture, transportation, is the sine qua non of the Soviet Socialist system, of defending the country against enemy attacks from without and of preparing the ground for the future Communist Society," the report added.

1100 Marine Flying Aids Established

Establishment of more than 1100 new aids to marine aviation by the Coast Guard in the year ended June 30 was announced yesterday by the Navy.

The most substantial increase was in the number of lighted navigational aids which increased from 10,849 to 11,971 in the year. However, the Navy added, that lighthouses—most spectacular of the lighted aids—have decreased due to war conditions, and only 13 of the 29 normally in use now are in operating.

Steinbeck Tells Soldier's Story Of Landing on Salerno Beach

By John Steinbeck

Somewhere in the Mediterranean Theater.—There is a good beach at Salerno and a very good landing at Red Beach No. 2. The ducks were coming loaded ashore and running up out of the water and joining the lines of trucks, and the pontoon piers were out in the water with large landing cars up against them.

Along the beach the bulldozers were at work pushing up sand ramps for the trucks to land on and just back of the beach were the white tapes that mean land mines have not been cleared out.

There are little bushes on the sand dunes at Red Beach south of the Sele River, and in a hole in the sand buttressed by sand bags a soldier sat with a leather covered steel telephone beside him. His shirt was off and his back was dark with sunburn. His helmet lay in the bottom of the hole and his rifle was on a little pile of brush to keep the sand out of it.

Soldier Had Settled Down

He had staked a shelter half on a pole to shade him from the sun, and he had spread bushes on top of that to camouflage it. Beside him was a water can and an empty "C" ration can to drink out of.

The soldier said, "Sure you can have a drink. Here; I'll pour it for you." He tilted the water can over the tin cup. "I hate to tell you what it tastes like," he said. I took a drink. "Well, doesn't it?" he said. "It sure does," I said. Up in the hills the 88's were popping and the little bursts threw sand about where they hit, and off to the seaward our cruisers were popping away at the 88's in the hills.

The soldier slapped at a sand fly on his shoulder and then scratched the place where it had bitten him. His face was dirty and streaked where the sweat had run down through the dirt, and his hair and his eyebrows were sunburned almost white. But there was a kind of gayety about him. His telephone buzzed and he answered it, and said, "Hasn't come through yet, sir, no sir. I'll tell him." He clicked off the phone.

"Bloody Hell," He Says

"When'd you come ashore?" he asked. And then without waiting for an answer he went on. "I came in just before dawn yesterday. I wasn't with the very first, but right in the second." He seemed to be very glad about it.

"It was hell," he said, "it was bloody hell." He seemed to be gratified at the hell it was, and that was right. The great question had been solved for him. He had been under fire. He knew now what he would do under fire. He would never have to go through that uncertainty again.

"I got pretty near up to there," he said, and pointed to two beautiful Greek temples about a mile away. "And then I got sent back here for beach communications. When did you say you got ashore?" and again he didn't wait for an answer.

Enemy Ready for Attack

"It was dark as hell," he said, "and we were just waiting out there." He pointed to the sea fleet rested. "If we thought we where the mass of the invasion fleet rested. "If we thought we were going to sneak ashore we were nuts," he said. "They were waiting for us all fixed up. Why, I heard they had been here two weeks waiting for us. They knew just where we were going to land. They had machine guns in the sand dunes and 88's on the hills.

"We were out there all packed in an LCI and then the hell broke loose. The sky was full of it and the star shells lighted it up and the tracers criss-crossed and the noise—we saw the assault go in, and then one of them hit a surf mine and went up, and in the light you could see them go flying about.

"I could see the boats land and the guys go wiggling and running, then maybe there'd be a lot of white lines and some of them would waddle about and collapse and some would hit the beach.

"It didn't seem like men getting killed, more like a picture, like a moving picture. We were pretty crowded up in there though, and then all of a sudden it came on me that this wasn't a moving picture. Those were guys getting the hell shot out of them, and then I got kind of scared, but what I wanted to do mostly was move around. I didn't like being cooped up there where you couldn't get away or get down close to the ground.

"Well the firing would stop and then it would get pitch black even then, and it was just beginning to get light too but the 88's sort of winked on the hills like messages, and the shells were bursting all around us. They had lots of 88's and they shot at everything. I was just getting real scared when we got the order to move in, and I swear that is the longest trip I ever took, that mile to the beach.

That Long Trip to Beach

"I thought we'd never get there. I figured that if I was only on the beach I could dig down and get out of the way. There was too damn many of us there in that LCI. I wanted to spread out. That one that hit the mine was still burning when we went on by it. Then we bumped the beach and the ramps went down and I hit the water up to my waist.

"The minute I was on the beach I felt better. It didn't seem like everybody was shooting at me, and I got up to that line of brush and flopped down and some other guys flopped down beside me and then we got feeling a little foolish.

"We stood up and moved on. Didn't say anything to each other, we just moved on. It was coming daylight then and the flashes of the guns weren't so bright. I felt a little like I was drunk. The ground heaved around under my feet and I was dull. I guess that was because of the firing. My ears aren't so good yet. I guess we moved up too far because I got sent back here."

He laughed openly. "I might have gone on right into Rome if some one hadn't sent me back. I guess I might have walked right up that hill there."

The cruisers began firing on the hill and the 88's fired back. From over near the hill came the heavy thudding of 50-caliber machine guns. The soldier felt pretty good. He knew what he could do now. He said, "When did you say you came ashore?"

AFL Disputes Membership Claim of CIO

By Joseph A. Loftus

Associated Press Staff Writer

Boston, Oct. 3.—The American Federation of Labor today credited the rival Congress of Industrial Organizations with only 2,250,000 members, less than half the CIO's claimed membership, while reporting its own paid up membership as nearly six million.

This estimate of CIO strength was contained in a hitherto unpublished note which AFL leaders handed to British trade unionists last February in explanation of the AFL's refusal to admit the CIO and the four independent railroad brotherhoods to the Anglo-American Trade Union committee. The document also set forth the AFL's reasons for rejecting the British proposals for a three-power committee which would include the Soviets.

The contents of the note became available today in the annual report of the executive council to the federation's sixty-third convention opening tomorrow.

Warns Break May Result

In polite but unmistakable language the AFL said that a break in Anglo-American labor relations might result if the British persisted in seeking to include the CIO and the brotherhoods.

Discussing suggestions that the British approach these organizations indirectly, the AFL said "it should be clearly noted that what we are unwilling to do directly, we are equally unwilling to have done indirectly. . . ."

"Finally, we have always regarded most highly and have prized deeply, the cordial, fraternal, cooperative relationship which has existed so many years between the British Trades Union Congress and the American Federation of Labor. We should not wish anything to take place that would in any way disturb that splendid relationship, especially at this particular time when more than ever it is essential that the forces of free labor be united the world over. . . ." If the situation were reversed, the AFL said, it would not "in any manner whatsoever, give such oppositional movement (in England) any cause whatever for comfort or encouragement."

"About Five Million," CIO Says

Citing CIO numerical inferiority as one reason for refusing to share American representation with it on the international committee, the AFL said: "No authentic or public record is available as to the members paying per capita or monthly contributions to that organization. The studious avoidance of publication of the paid-up membership by the CIO leaves conjecture or projected membership subject to serious question.

"Estimated, however, from records of the reported and allied membership of the unions making up the CIO at present, and from such other sources as have been made available, it is fair to assert that the total membership of the CIO approximates 2,225,000. It is thus apparent that the membership of the AFL is almost three times as large as the CIO."

CIO officials say the membership of their affiliated unions aggregates "about five million." AFL Secretary-Treasurer George Meany reported per capita tax receipts from 5,393,021 members as of August 31, a net gain of 456,4440 in the year despite the withdrawal of the big Machinists' Union last May 31. The treasury balance was reported as $1,680,076.

South Dakota Could Lick Tirpitz, Gatch Says

By the Associated Press

Rear Admiral Thomas Leigh Gatch let it be known yesterday that he would bet on his battleship South Dakota if the Germans wanted to use the Admiral Tirpitz in a duel.

Gatch is the skipper of the 35,000-ton South Dakota, until yesterday known to the world only as the "Battleship X" which blew 32 attacking Japanese planes out of the air with a hail of gunfire and beat a Japanese warship concentration in a night battle in the Solomons.

"The South Dakota," Gatch asserted in a radio program yesterday, "is the greatest in the world, including the much vaunted Admiral Tirpitz."

Gatch said that the engagement in the Solomons when the Japanese tried to relieve Guadalcanal by use of superior air power "proved that the battleship—with proper air coordination—rules the seas.

"I rather think the battleship is here to stay," he declared.

The Japanese, the admiral said, "build good ships—but every time we've met them on anything like equal terms they've been overwhelmingly defeated. I think we will keep on doing it."

75,000 In New York Pray For Pope

New York, Oct. 3 (INS).—The prayers of some 75,000 devout Catholics, including those of Archbishop Francis J. Spellman, were offered tonight for the spiritual safety of the Pope and the sparing of Rome from destruction.

The Archbishop, who declared recently that the Pope was a prisoner of the Nazis in Vatican City, told the mammoth prayer meeting at the Polo Grounds:

"I ask you to pray for our Holy Father, Pope Pius XII, as he with sorrowful heart looks with appeal to his children in all the world, not that he be spared to life, for death to him in his agony of suffering would be a mercy, and a martyr's death for him would be the traditional following of the way of many who have sat in Peter's chair.

"Not for him therefore do I plead, but for his cause, the cause of Christ, the cause of right, the cause of civilization. I beg for prayers that Rome, the city of the soul, eternal Rome, be spared destruction; and above all that Rome be not destroyed by us, by baiting us; and from our soul's depth, we plead again for our beloved land."

Postwar Hunt For Pilfered Art Envisioned

By the Associated Press

New York, Oct. 3.—Georges Wildenstein, an art expert of Paris and New York, said today a great treasure hunt would be necessary after the war to recover millions of dollars in art masterpieces stolen by the Nazis from collectors in occupied Europe.

Paintings, sculpture, furniture, tapestries and porcelains have gone into private collections of high Nazi officials, Wildenstein declared, while others have been scattered through public auction sales.

"I believe that one of the decrees of the peace should be to forbid the removal of art works from any part of Europe and to declare a moratorium on all transactions in paintings, sculpture and other art objects," he said.

He also recommended that proof of ownership before 1936 be required of all Germans, Italians and neutrals in Europe possessing art objects of value.

The Rothchild family alone lost almost 100 million dollars worth of masterpieces to the Germans, Wildenstein asserted, among them Rubens' portrait of his wife, child and self; "The Astronomer" by Vermeer; a famous Gainsborough portrait valued at $250,000; Rembrandt's "Man at the Window" and "Standard Bearer," and Goya's "Women on a Balcony."

Both Hitler and Goering have large collections of confiscated works, he continued, adding that Goering now possesses "The Adoration of the Lamb," a polyptych by Jan and Hubert van Eyck which was taken from the Ghent cathedral in Belgium.

Wildenstein said "the monumental task of tracing rightful ownership appears almost insurmountable unless a careful plan is developed to solve the tangle."

DFC Awarded District Flier In Axis Attack

Already wearing the Air Medal and three Oak Leaf Clusters, First Lieut. Robert E. Goodwin, navigator of a Flying Fortress, has received the Distinguished Flying Cross for extraordinary achievement in 15 missions over Axis-held Europe.

GOODWIN

Goodwin, a son of Mrs. Ruth Burnside of 700 Quackenbos st. nw., had previously been cited for destroying enemy aircraft.

The DFC citation read:

"Displaying great courage and skill, Lieutenant Goodwin has materially aided in the success of each of the 15 missions, and fighting from his gun position has destroyed two enemy planes and warded off many attacks. The courage and coolness and skill displayed by Lieutenant Goodwin on all these occasions reflects the highest credit upon himself and the armed forces of the United States."

A native of Tennessee, Goodwin attended the University of Cincinnati for two years. He was employed by Herby's Motor Co. in Alexandria prior to his enlistment in January, 1942. The youth received his wings the following Christmas and was sent overseas last spring.

Bombardier Has Record of Sinking Six Jap Vessels

By the Associated Press

Somewhere in New Guinea, Sept. 27 (Delayed).—Capt. George P. Dunmore, who concentrates on sinking Japanese ships, has sent six to the bottom, a record no other bombardier in this area can equal.

Lieut. Gen. George C. Kenney, commanding officer of the Fifth Air Force, has been so impressed with this fancy showing—it's estimated that Dunmore has sunk 20,500 tons of Japanese shipping—that he's asked for a picture of the 25-year-old native of Royal Oak, Mich., to hang in his office

Dunmore rides as bombardier with a Liberator unit known as the Jolly Rogers.

He started his record string December 8, 1942, when he sank a heavy cruiser. Since then he has destroyed four cargo vessels and a cargo-transport. Among his crew was Sergt. Marvin C. Parson of 642 Milwaukee pl. se., Washington, D. C., now missing in action.

Parson Here Briefly

Little was known of Parson last night in Washington except that he boarded for a few months with Mrs. Philip Staub, at the Milwaukee pl. address. It was said there he was single and about 27 years old. It was thought he had no family.

FRESH FLOOR SHOWS. Either a new floor revue or the freshening up of current shows with new faces seems to be the rage among nitery impresarios this week. . . . Leading off is the Troika with that bouncing gent, Benny Fields, who opens tonight. . . . The Casino Royal offers a full new show tonight from the emcee to the littlest dancing girl. The Vee Ames Girls will be responsible for the flashier bits. . . . Tomorrow night Paul Young's will welcome new troupers, except for the indispensible Owen and Parker, Singer Bob Preble and Pianist Margie Capps. The newies are Paul Rossini, magician; Dancer Helen Young and Singer Harriet Brent. . . . The Russian revel offered at the Balalaika over the weekend has a caviar flavor and steams like a good plate of borscht. Especially flavorsome is the skit, "Love By the Rank" with Lola Lolik playing the sweetheart of the regiment. . . . Olmsted's Club has added the Capitol Theater's Lynn Allison to its late show. (Remind youurself to be sure to hear Conseulo Flowerton sing "Algebra" at Olmsted's.) . . . At the El Morocco of the Northeast, Kavakos' Grill, is leaping twice a night with the doings of "Frantic Frankie" Donato and the wierdly clever impersonations of Sonny Collette.

The new Windsor Room opens informally today with Matt Windsor and singer Mattie dispensing songs and rhythm. The bang-up formal opening is due on Thursday.

THE ASTIGMATIC PUBLIC EYE. George Bancroft of the movies sat jovially behind a chicken dinner at the Neptune Room and no one bothered him at all . . . But Henry Fonda, carefully steered to a corner table in the old New Orleans with his back to everyone, had to let his soup get cold while he gave autographs.

LARGE REQUESTS. Jeff Ford, owner of the Lafayette Hotel (and president of a hotel and restaurant chain), is pondering a pair of important propositions. A national magazine has asked for his life story. And so many customers have suggested that he turn the lower level of the Lafayette dining room into a nitery that he's giving it deep thought.

Denny Beckner at the Victory Room is the only dancing bandleader to invade our town. In his skits he dances a la Fred Astaire, kicks right over the microphone.

BEAUTIFUL BLITZES. All the

nitery lasses are trying to outdo each other in getting dizzy new scenery. El Patio's Vicki Vickee is currently done up in black velvet with bowknots of ermine disposed around the decolletage. And her perfume is "Aphrodisia!" . . . Peggy Leonard of the Hi Hat is parading in green silk jersey with a gold cloth top . . . Jane Marlow of Restaurant "823" has spent quantities of dinero on a black chiffon with gobs of little pink pearls at the neckline . . . Jean Lee of the Dubonnet Room is dashing in a blouse of chalk white sequins and flaring black skirt . . . Irene Del Rio, dancing at the Lotus, wears a subtly conceived costume of wood rose crepe with banks of jet embroidery . . . Hostess Virginia Dare of Ruby Foo's doesn't wear formals but she looks mighty smart in a pale gray suit with a marcasite lapel ornament.

LATIN ACES. There are almost as many varieties of Latin-American music as there are countries below the border. Louis Betancourt, now at La Conga, is a Guatemalan and plays the Central-American kind . . . Chico Morales, who wields the maracas amazingly at the Copocabana, is a Puerto Rican, takes such pride in the Caribbean that his programs are entirely of Puerto Rican and Cuban music . . . Another notable Latin is Chago Rodrigues appearing at Treasure Island. Chago's a free thinker, has been on the radio and in clubs for so long that he plays any kind of Latin music, even if it was composed in Kokomo.

There'll be a new band in the Metronome Room about October 15. All hands will be sorry to see Sandy Sandifer go after so many months. But commitments are calling.

Navy Perfects Cream to Protect Against Shell Flash Burns

Searing heat caused by the flash of shells, bombs or torpedo explosions, one of the deadliest of battle hazards, has been rendered harmless by a new cream, perfected at the Naval Medical Research Institute, Bethesda, which protests the skin against heat of more than 1832 degrees Fahrenheit.

The preparation is now being distributed to the fleet for use under battle conditions where flash burns have ranked second only to gunshot and shell fragmentation wounds as a cause of casualties in the Navy and Marine Corps.

Men often escape fragments of exploding missiles, only to be killed or disfigured by the intense heat of the resulting flash, Navy officials explained, and it was to combat this condition that research was started under the direction of Lieut. Comdr. Gordon B. Fauley, Medical Corps USNR, and Dr. A. C. Ivy, consultant.

Months of Tests

Four months of experimentation evolved the compound, which is of the consistency of cold cream and is a battleship gray in color.

Clothing protects the body from all but the most intense flash heat, thus it is necessary only to apply the ointment to exposed portions such as the face and hands.

The cream is expected to prove a boon to tank crews also, since a large percentage of their injuries are caused by powder and fuel flash burns.

Officers, enlisted men and members of the Women's Reserve acted as human guinea pigs in clinical tests which proved:

1. The preparation protects the skin against a flash burn of more than 1000 degrees centigrade (1832 fahrenheit).

2. It may be applied to the exposed surfaces of the body in two minutes or less; is effective for six to eight hours and may be removed easily with soap and water.

3. It has no toxic or allergic effects.

Supplements Other Equipment

It was emphasized that the cream is not intended to displace but merely to supplement such anti-flash equipment as hood, facemask and gloves.

During the course of research it was found that the severity of flash burns varies with the toughness and pigmentation of the skin.

In line with this, a report submitted to Rear Admiral Ross T. McIntire, surgeon general of the Navy, recommended that "men in armored units and aboard ship be instructed to toughen their skin by exposure to the sun and wind."

Corcoran School Of Art to Open 57th Term Today

Corcoran School of Art will open its fifty-seventh term today, with schedules arranged in such a way as to make it possible for servicemen as well as working people to attend classes.

Richard Lahey, principal, cited last year's record enrollment of 539 students and expressed the belief that it would be topped by this year's attendance. He also said that an arrangement with George Washington University for GW Art students to do their art work at Corcoran would be continued.

Classes include life, portrait, still life, composition and landscape, drawing, painting, modeling, poster and woodcarving. Special courses for children of 11 years or over will begin October 18.

Officially Reported Sinkings Hit New Low

By the Associated Press

Only two United Nations and neutral ship losses in the western Atlantic were announced officially in September, the lowest toll yet reported in one month for these waters since the United States went to war.

At the month's close, however, survivors of sunken ships told unofficially of renewed mass attacks by U-boats.

The Brazilian motor passenger steamer Itapage, whose loss was announced last week, was the 688th Allied or neutral merchant ship officially reported destroyed by Axis submarine attack in the western Atlantic since Pearl Harbor. It was Brazil's twenty-fifth war loss.

Meanwhile, Axis submarine wolf packs again raided North Atlantic convoys, destroying, on the basis of survivors' stories, at least nine Allied vessels in a 10-day running battle.

No official announcement has been made of cargo ships sunk in the action, but Britain and Canada have admitted the destruction of three warships as a result of the reappearance of Axis submarines in the North Atlantic after four months' absence.

Survivors termed the new German torpedoes used in the attack as deadly and efficient, recalling Prime Minister Churchill's recent statement that the Axis undersea raiders returning to the Battle of the Atlantic "no doubt have been fitted with what is thought to be the best and latest equipment."

The improved antiaircraft armament of Axis submarines was indicated by the damage inflicted on one of the big Royal Canadian Air Force Liberator bombers in a recent two-day battle between planes and a U-boat wolf pack in the North Atlantic convoy route.

The RCAF said last week that the U-boats elected to remain surfaced and resist Canadian planes in six separate attacks with "a fierce curtain of antiaircraft fire."

W. A. Graham, U.S. Official, to Leave For Puerto Rico

Walter A. Graham, Federal official and religious leader here, leaves today to assume a new position in Puerto Rico. The nature of the new assignment is confidential and will be "for the duration," he stated yesterday.

GRAHAM

Graham tendered his resignation as director of training for the General Accounting Office and as director of Baltimore Methodist Conference's young adult program.

One of the lay leaders of Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church, Graham pioneered in young adult work for men and women between 24 and 40, and inaugurated the annual Methodist young adult assemblies at Western Maryland College, Westminster. He has taught a Sunday school class at Mount Vernon Church.

Accompanying him on his new assignment will be Mrs. Graham and their children—Walter, jr., 8, and Ermaleen, 3.

Last Call for De Luxe Doings This Midnight

IN VIEW of the stellar quality and the purpose of the "Stars at Midnight" war bond show, to be given at both the Earle and Capitol Theaters tonight, beginning at 11:45 o'clock, a last-minute roundup of what may be expected in this dazzling climax to the Washington theaters' September drive in behalf of the Third War Loan seems not out of place.

AL JOLSON

Foremost among the star attractions will be the "Lucky 'Leventh" Coast Guard Band, under the direction of Rudy Vallee; Victor Mature, former stage and screen player, now boatswain's mate first class, United States Coast Guard, and Boatswain's Mate Second Class Melvin Baldwin and Cockswain Raymond F. O'Malley, the only two survivors of the ill-fated Escanaba, recently sunk in the North Atlantic.

Baldwin and O'Malley come to the Capital direct from an extensive bond-selling tour. When they meet Victor Mature in the show tonight, they will be meeting again the man who was on the combat cutter that rescued them at sea.

Rudy Vallee's band hails from California and is made up of musicians who, prior to their enlistment in the Coast Guard, were featured with some of the biggest "name" bands in the country. Prominent among its soloists and specialists are Jimmy Grier, bandmaster; the Flying Coast Guard Cutters, acrobats extraodinary; Bob Maxwell, harpist; Dave Wade, Andy Secrest, fomerly with Paul Whiteman, and King Jackson, late of Spike Jones' City Slickers, currently featured in "Thank Your Lucky Stars," on the Earle screen.

Additional entertainment will be provided by the combined stage shows of the Earle and Capitol, including Tim Herbert, comedian—more quickly identified in the show-wise mind as Herman Timberg, jr.—Eunice Healy, dancer; the Earle Roxyettes, Joe Lombardi and His Music Masters; Sam Jack Kaufman and the Capitol Orchestra and Carmen Cavallero, artist at the keyboard, currently at the Statler Hotel.

But the important point is that seats for this matutinal gala are still available by the purchase of a $100 war bond at either the Capitol or the Earle. When the seating capacities of the two theaters have been exhausted, it will mean that 5,500 bonds have been sold to a total of $368,000. It is hardly conceivable that the Capital's theatergoers will let themselves or the Third War Loan down.

The Record Says Different

The complaint of our old friend Al Jolson, just returned from his fourth overseas tour entertaining the front line servicemen, that not enough top-flight stars are making the overseas jaunts seems to be belied by the latest report of the officials of the USO-Camp Shows.

According to their figures, from November 1941 to September 1943, 609 entertainers in 114 show troupes have been sent out of the country, exclusive of permanent units stationed in Hawaii.

The list of these volunteer artists is too long for reproduction here, but on it are such names as Larry Adler, Judith Anderson, Jack Benny, Edgar Bergen (and of course, Charlie McCarthy), Joan Blondell, Ray Bolger, Joe E. Brown, Paul Draper, Kay Francis, John Garfield, Bob Hope, Frances Langford, Laurel & Hardy, Anna Lee, Joe E. Lewis, Fredric March, Chico Marx, Mitzi Mayfair, Adolphe Menjou, Merle Oberon, Pat O'Brien, Jane Pickens, Martha Raye, the Ritz Brothers, Bert Wheeler and columns more.

All may not have reached the fighting fronts, but they went where they were routed.

Al's criticism of the quality of films and projection and sound equipment that are being sent to the front lines is only an echo of the same complaint recently made by S/Sgt. Irving Falk, United States Army, whose V-letter came from French Morocco and was reproduced here. Something ought to be done.

Another Super-Duper Benefit

Under the sponsorship of residents in the Howard Park Civic and Defense Area, great "Cavalcade of Negro Music" will be presented in Griffith Stadium on Wednesday night, October 6, at 8 o'clock. The roofless stadium will resound with everything from opera's high "C's" to the bass "B's" of boogie-woogie—and for the worthiest of causes.

This mammoth show will be for the benefit of the Howard Park Nursery Fund and the alleviation of the child care and housing problem for essential warworkers in the lower brackets, not covered by the Lanham Act. The proceeds will be devoted to the proper housing, care and entertainment of the children of civilian workers and domestics who abandon their own homes to care for those of essential warworkers for long hours every day. It is a problem that needs to be met.

The array of talent for Wednesday night is impressive. Participating in the program will be the Southernaires, singers of favorite folk songs and spirituals; the Deep River boys, whose versatility carries them from Bach to Berlin; Ethyle Wise and Avis Andrews, newest of the great feminine Negro voices; Billy Eckstein, local singer making his concert debut—like Sinatra—after long service as an orchestra vocalist; Aubrey Pankey, barytone; Art Tatum, blind wizard of the keyboard; Lucky Millinder and His Orchestra, and numerous others, with Richard Huey as m. c.

A unique evening of music, for which the $1.10 admission will be devoted to a laudable purpose.

Power-of-Suggestion Note

Did you notice that just as soon as the return engagement of "Blossom Time" was announced the weather turned warm?

Nostalgia at Pix

The three-play screen bill now on view at the Pix Theater covers a wide catholicity of taste.

Commanding major interest, is the "Charlie Chaplin Festival," which exhumes as one solid segment of the bill four of the comedian's conspicuous hits of the old silent days—"The Immigrant," "The Adventurer," "The Cure" and "Easy Street."

With action speeded up to accommodate newly added sound effects—but no dialogue—there is a fuss and frenzy about them all that was not previously present. That, however, does not obscure the fact that Chaplain was, and is, the supreme comic genius of slapstick.

The most hilariously volcanic of the four subjects are "The Cure" and "Easy Street."

In all four, Chaplin is supported by what amounted in its day to a permanent stock company that had the blonde and vastly popular Edna Purviance as the unfailing object of the little vagabond's quaint heroics and dimdent affection.

The second of the bill's nostalgic chapters consists of the most exciting moments of the past 20 years or so in the prize ring—Dempsey vs. Firpo, and in the long-count Chicago fight with Tunney; Sharkey vs. Max Schmeling, Schmeling vs. Young Stribling and Carners, etc..

For the modern touch there is Hal Roach's "Yanks Ahoy," a comedy of the current war, with William Tracy, Joe Sawyer, Marjorie Woodworth, Minor Watson, and numerous others in the top spots.

Quite a bill, by and large, considerably meatier than most.

HEDDA HOPPER

Now It Can Be Done!

Hollywood, Oct. 3.—When Lieut. Col. David MacDonald of "Desert Victory" fame was here, Metro wanted him to linger on and supervise a picture of Malta. MacDonald said it couldn't be done in this country. Now it has been switched to England under Alex Korda's banner, and will probably star Laurence Olivier and Vivien Leigh, and they'll get actual scenes of Malta in the film . . . I hope it's true that Harry Cohn has bought the life story of D. W. Griffith, the daddy of all films. It's called "Silver Glory" and was written by Lillian Gish. Lillian has finished her picture job and starts a lecture tour in Texas, which will keep her busy until long after snow flies . . . Red Skelton is now a SPAR. During a personal appearance in Portland he was invited to launch a Victory ship. This is traditionally a woman's privilege, but Red allowed himself to be done up in a frowsy blonde wig, a boa hat and satin gown. The delighted SPARS immediately decidd to make him one of their own, and he was sworn into their ranks.

VIVIEN LEIGH

Tallu Finds a Genius

Tallulah Bankhead is the latest to have star dust in her eyes while talking about Director Alfred Hitchcock. She said, "If that word 'genius' wasn't so overworked in Holly, that's the term I'd apply to him. Not since David Belasco has there been a man who understands actors like Hitchy. Imagine playing a whole picture in drab clothes in a lifeboat without going stark staring mad! He's even conquered the elements." They went out to sea for some fog scenes. Fog was too thick, so they came back and made their own in the studio. "It's more like a play than a picture," says Tallu. "Just like 'Little Foxes,' there's a great part for every member of the cast. This is what I've been watiing for. He's a man of such taste and judgment you can't even give him an argument." And that from Tallu, who'd rather argue than eat, is really something.

John Hodiak, who plays opposite Tallu, has one of those discovery stories that could only happen here. For 11 years he wanted to be an actor, and got as far as radio in Chicago. Finally Metro took him on from there to New York, and made a test with the colored actor, Canada Lee, in a scene from "Liberty Ship," which hasn't yet been produced. Hodiak was signed by Metro, and given bits in three of their pictures. Hitchock saw the test of Canada Lee, not only signed him but got John Hodiak as leading man of "Liberty Boat"

Global Bill at the Trans-Lux

The news section and short-reel subjects making up the new bill at the Trans-Lux Theater are of world-wide geographical scope.

Primary interest will center in the war clips depicting the first days of the invasion of Italy and the thrilling battle of the heroic U. S. Fifth Army at Salerno, and the U. S. bombers ranging the South Pacific and disrupting the enemy's shipping lanes.

These sequences are richly augmented by a comprehensive coverage of events at home, including Mrs. Roosevelt's return from "Down Under," provision for turkey dinners on all the fighting fronts, late sports events and whatnot.

Five short-reels include "Forgotten Treasure," a late release in John Nesbitt's "Passing Parade" series; "Memories of Australia," revealing what the Anzac country was like before the war; "Sweeping Oars," with the University of Washington as its setting, and "Motoring in Mexico," a travelogue in color down the Pacific Coast Highway.

For further variety, Walt Disney's cartoon, "Reason and Emotion," is tucked in to add the final fillip to an engrossing program.

LEONARD LYONS

Broadway Potpourri

New York, Oct. 3.

Joseph Elman is the 14-year-old son of Mischa Elman. The youngster has been taking violin lessons and promises to be an able musician. Last week, while the boy was playing a practice piece, his illustrious father tried to correct him, and showed him how it should be played. "Oh, no," Joseph insisted, "my teacher says that's wrong, and my teacher knows." . . . "Do you want to be a teacher, or do you want to be a concert violinist?" Mischa Elman asked his son—who replied: "I don't want to be a concert violinist." . . . "Good," said Elman. "That means one competitor less."

ANDRE KOSTELANETZ

Jim Farley listened to some political talk about the municipal election in November. He heard some men boasting of the large number of votes they controlled . . . "I've been in politics a long time," said Farley. "And when it comes to controlling votes, I've learned one thing: that I never controlled more than one vote—my own."

Betty Smith, author of the best-seller, "A Tree Grows in Brooklyn," has written a play about the Mormons—"And Never Yield." Michael Todd probably will produce it . . . A Chicago agent, Biggie Levin, has secured the story rights to the life of General Billy Mitchell . . . Last week Jack Pearl and Harry Green returned to Broadway in "All for All," a play about a manufacturer who gives his employees a voice in the management, a share in the profits, tea at 4 p. m., daily massages, etc. In the front row, at last night's premiere, was Bill Jack, head of Jack & Heinz, the company which received so much publicity recently for practicing such liberal policies. Mr. Jack bought every seat in the theater, for three nights.

Andre Kostelanetz, who was born in a small town in the Russian Ukraine, now lives in Silver Mine, Conn. Alexander Smallens, the conductor, was born in Petrograd. His grandfather was born in the Ukrainian town from which Kostelanetz comes. Smallens now lives in Stamford, Conn.—only a few miles from Kostelanetz . . . A few days ago Kostelanetz sent to Smallens' home in Stamford a picture of himself, autographed: "From one Connecticut Yankee to Another."

Herman Mankiewicz, the scenario writer, is in town now. Mankiewicz, who won an Academy Award, once worked for the New York Times, in the day when George S. Kaufman worked there. They wrote a play, "The Good Fellow," which was produced by Crosby Caige and directed by Howard Lindsay. It opened on a Thursday and closed on Saturday night. Saturday afternoon they all held a conference and agreed that it would be wise to close the play that night. When the decision was made, Kaufman extended his hand to his collaborator and shrugged: "Anyway, pleased to have met you."

Herman's brother, Joe Mankiewicz, is a Hollywood producer. Just before Joe's son was born, he learned the disturbing news that his wife had selected "Knute" as the name for the child. Mrs Mankiewicz decided also that they must purchase a dog as a playmate for the baby . . . By the time the boy was born, Joe already had bought a dog and had it trained by an expert. Mrs. Mankiewicz liked the animal and thought he'd make an ideal playmate for their new son, who would be named "Knute" . . . "But that can't be," her husband reported. "The dog is named 'Knute.' And it's so well trained, it won't answer to any other name" . . . Their son was named "Tom."

Sir Cedric Hardwicke, the British actor, isn't disturbed when he's addressed informally, instead of by his title. Hardwicke's friends explain it this way: He wears his honors lightly because of something which happened during the knighting ceremony at Buckingham Palace. When Hardwicke's turn came, he knelt—as he had seen the others do. The late King George whispered to an aide: "Who is he?" . . . "Cedric Hardwicke," 'said the aide. "Who?" asked the King . . . "The actor, said the aide . . . "An actor?" said the King, who then tapped him with the gold sword, and pronounced: "Arise, Sir Cedric Horrack."

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

The testimony herein, dealing with the 1943 World Series, could very well be thrown out of consideration as incompetent, or dismissed as pure bias, and completely malicious.

Our witness is Clark Griffith, who picks the Yankees of the American League to beat the Cardinals of the National League. With Mr. Griffith, that is a reflex action. It's in his blood to pick the American League to beat the National League. He's an habitual, unreconstructed National League hater.

POVICH

Griffith's testimony on anything involving the American League vs. the National League could be disqualified on a number of counts, topped by the over-all charge of prejudice. He started hating the National League 43 years ago, and he hasn't mellowed much when it comes down to a choice between the two leagues.

His dislike for the National League commenced in the winter of 1900-01 when that league fought him by every means to prevent Griffith and his two allies, the late Ban Johnson and Charley Comiskey, from establishing the American League as a new major league circuit. Griffith won that fight and has gloated ever since at every discomfiture of the National League whether in World Series or the all-star games.

His No. 2 hate is the New York Yankees, but most every year at World Series time, he subordinates that peeve against the Yankees, to cheer for them in the World Series. Anything to beat the National League, even if it means rooting for the Yankees.

And so, completely wishful, he is picking the Yankees to beat the Cardinals in this World Series. "They'll lick those Cardinals, sure as shootin'," he says. "Consarn it, they're a better team than those Cardinals."

He says Morton Cooper won't win a game for the Cardinals in the series, dismissing the Cards' top pitcher completely as a series factor." "Cooper is jinxed," says Griffith, recalling that in two All-Star games and in his two series starts last year, the Cardinal ace was knocked out of the box.

Griffith likes to carry on with such things as hexes. "A jinx is a jinx," he says. "A pitcher is never apt to get over one. It haunts him. Lefty Grove was knocked out of the box the first 19 times he tried to beat my Washington club back in '25 and '26. (Ed. note—it was 13 times). It got so Connie Mack wouldn't start him against us."

He remembers the beginning of Washington's hex against Grove. "Jack Dunn had Grove with the Orioles. Those were the years when the big leagues couldn't draft players. They kept winning pennants for the Orioles and Dunn used to say his mipor league team could beat Washington. He challenged us in 1924, and said he would beat us with Grove. I told him 'no busher like Grove on a bush town team like Baltimore could beat us.'

"We played the game, after our season ended. I had Tom Zachary working on a bonus and I told him he could get his bonus if he licked Grove. Zachary bore down. It was 0-0 for six innings and then we banged Grove for six runs. Grove was disgusted, and never had any confidence against us when he came into the league."

As for Cooper, Griffith says it's prefectly simple why he doesn't beat American League teams. "He's got a fast ball but it's just the kind of a fast ball our league likes to hit. It's fast but it isn't alive. It doesn't jump. We murder that kind in our league."

Griffith tries to build up a case for the Yankees by saying he detects a recent improvement in the Yankees' play. "Joe Gordon played better ball in the last two weeks than he did all season. Almost all of their pitchers are coming around now. And this time the Yankees will be bearing down."

He says the Yanks underestimated the Cards last year. "They thought they had easy pickings and the Cards ran 'em ragged. The Yanks won't make that mistake again. You watch 'em. They're going to take over and run the Cards dizzy in this series. Those Yanks will be playing for keeps."

The only pitchers who will cause the Yankees trouble, he says, are the Cardinals' left-handers—Max Lanier, Harry Brecheen and perhaps Ernie White. "The Yankees' batting order doesn't line up as strong against left-handed pitching. That's when they take Weatherly and Metheny out of their outfield and put in Stainback and Lindell. They're weaker then."

But he doesn't think the Cardinals are as hot as they were last year. "You can't lose outfielders like Terry Moore and Slaughter and say your team is just as good. The Cardinals aren't the same team that beat the Yankees last season."

Of all the Cardinals, Griffith likes their catcher, Walker Cooper, best. How much does he like Cooper? "Wa-al, I guess he's the best catcher in the business right now." But there was still a note of reluctance in that tribute to a National Leaguer.

Green Bay Smothers Cardinals by 28 to 7

Rookie Irv Comp Hurls Two Touchdown Passes to Lead Packer Air Attack

Chicago, Oct. 3 (AP).—Rookie Irv Comp pitched two touchdown passes, Lou Brock added another and Tony Canadeo set up a fourth, as the Green Bay Packers stirred up a vicious aerial assault which smashed the Chicago Cardinals 28-7 today in a National Football League game before a crowd of 15,563.

The Packers, defeating the Cards for the eleventh consecutive time since 1937, scored twice in short order in the first quarter, added another touchdown in the second, when Tony Canadeo flicked 15 yards to end Don Hutson and then Ted Fritsch lunged over from the 2-yard line, and counted again in the third period.

Despite the strong overhead barrage thrown up by Rookie Ronnie Cahill, of Holy Cross, the Cardinals could move in to the payoff acre only in the second stanza.

Cahill passed 20 times, completed 11 for 137 yards and had five of the tosses stray into opponent's arms. At the outset of the second quarter he threaded a 29-yard forward to end Ed Rucinski in the end zone and Lee Stokes placekicked the point.

In the first four times with the ball the Cardinals lost 37 yards, 26 of them when Joel Mason blocked Al Purdin's fourth-down punt and Bob Murrow recovered for the Redbirds on their own 18. In six plays the Packers scored, Comp passing 8 yards to Mason for the marker. Five minutes later Comp again hit Mason, for 12 yards and another touchdown to Cap for a 50-yard march.

One of Hutson's two interceptions came in the third period, setting in motion a Packer drive of 68 yards which was climaxed by Brock's 35-yard toss to Happy Jacunsky for the final touchdown.

Hutson, used sparingly, snagged two 15-yard aerials from Canadeo and place-kicked all extra points.

Camp Grant Ties Marquette In Final Play

By the Associated Press

Rockford, Ill., Oct. 3.—Camp Grant, a 10-to-7 winner a week ago over Wisconsin on a field goal in the final minute of play, scored a touchdown today with less than two minutes left to tie Marquette, 7 to 7, before 10,000 civilian and soldier spectators.

End Bill Huber scored the Camp Grant touchdown in spectacular fashion, grabbing a 33-yard pass from Bill Reed on the 10-yard line, wrestling for the ball a few seconds with a Marquette defender, and then taking firm hold of it to run the remaining 10 yards across the goal.

Bob Orlando, the field-goal-kicking hero of the Wisconsin victory, booted the extra point to deadlock the score.

Marquette made its touchdown in the third period when John Rudan, passing star of the game, hit into the line from the Camp Grant 26, backed away, and cut around end to sprint over the goal line. Harvey Baerwald kicked the point.

Camp Grant topped Marquette in first downs, 11 to 9, and outrushed the Hilltoppers, 162 yards to 61.

By the Associated Press

Cincinnati, Oct. 3.—The Brooklyn Dodgers ended their baseball season on a double note today, losing to the Cincinnati Reds, 6 to 1, but finishing in the show spot in league standings because of Pittsburgh's defeat by Philadelphia.

Case Steals Three Bases, Nats Bow, 4-1

Fleet Outfielder Wins 'Thief' Title Fifth Year; 200th Hit for Wakefield

The Nats brought their season's affairs to a conclusion yesterday on the discordant note of a 4-1 beating by the Tigers at Griffith Stadium where 5000 fans witnessed some interesting statistics in the making.

The statistics they liked best was provided by George Case, who clinched the American League base-stealing championship for the fifth successive season with a thieving carnival that netted him three more thefts—his 59th, 60th and 61st of the year.

Case Steals 3 Bases

His swollen leg taped by yards of the stuff, Case ran wild against the Tigers to leave Wally Moses, of the White Sox, three bases in his wake on the final day of the season. Case was thrown out at second by Catcher Dixie Parsons on his first stealing attempt, but thereafter he stole second twice and made a clean steal of third.

The Tigers dispatched the Nats in one hour and 18 minutes, the shortest game of the year at the Stadium.

Dizzy Trout emerged from the contest as the American League's second 20-game winner this season, joining Spud Chandler of the Yankees in that class. He won his duel with Mickey Haefner despite the fact the Nats obtained nine hits in contrast to the Tigers' seven.

Dick Wakefield, Detroit rookie, contributed to the statistical highlights of the contest by walloping a two-bagger in his first time at bat. It was his 200th hit of the year, and Wakefield is presumed to be the only first-year man to collect 200 hits in a season.

Duel for Six Innings

For six innings it was a tight pitching duel between Trout and Haefner. The Tigers took a one-run lead in the fourth on singles by Wood and Harris and a muff of a thrown ball by Myatt. The Nats tied it up in the same inning on doubles by Jake Powell and Rookie Charlie Roberts.

In the sixth, the Tigers knocked Haefner loose from three runs and the ball game. After Wakefield walked, York banged a triple to center, and a bit later there were hits by Bloodworth and Trout. But the Nats didn't care much, what with second place clinched earlier in the week.

Cards Defeat Giants, 5 to 4; Leave for N. Y.

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, Oct. 3.—The dashing St. Louis Cardinals successfully finished their second consecutive National League championship campaign today by bowling over the last place New York Giants, 5 to 4, to run their total string of victories to 105, one less than last year.

Two hours later, confident and happy, they were on their way to New York to open the World Series against the Yankees Tuesday.

The Cardinals became the first champions in 30 years to repeat with more than 100 victories. The New York Giants scored 103 in 1912 and repeated with 101 in 1913.

It was the Cards' twenty-seventh triumph in their last 33 games, an achievement comparable to their sensational stretch finish of a year ago when they won 20 of their final 24 games.

Manager Billy Southworth announced he would name his starting pitcher aboard the train tomorrow, ending fans' speculation which has centered around Right-hander Mort Cooper and Max Lanier, a southpaw.

Southworth again kept Stan Musial, 22-year-old rightfield star, on the bench to further rest his weakened ankle, twisted in Friday's game. However, he permitted Musial to pinch hit for Rookie Right-handed Pitcher Billy Byerly in the fifth inning and Musial blasted a long single to right that started a three-run scoring spree to put the trailing Cardinals ahead, 5 to 4.

Harry Brecheen, left-handed pitcher, was taken along despite a 100-degree temperature which developed after a tooth extraction yesterday. He also is suffering from a cold.

Yankees Whip Browns; Zuber Allows 3 Hits

By the Associated Press

New York, Oct. 3.—Bill Zuber, who may be a surprise starter for the Yankees in the World Series, pitched three-hit ball today as the American League champions beat the St. Louis Brown, 5 to 2, in their last game of the season.

In chalking up his eighth win against four defeats, Zuber had a one-hit shutout going into the eighth when the Browns scored their runs on a base on balls, an infield out and singles by Ellis Clary and George McQuinn. Zuber struck out seven and walked five.

Denny Galehouse held the Yanks scoreless for three innings, but was touched for a run in the fourth on Charley Keller's triple and Bill Dickey's single. In the sixth, five straight singles and a double play accounted for four more Yankee runs and sent Galehouse to the showers.

The Yanks swept the three-game series with the Browns and took the season 22-game series, 17 to 5. Dickey singled twice in three times at bat to finish the season with a .351 average.

Jeffra, Cockfield Fight Here Tonight

Former Bantam and Featherweight Champ May Get Crack at Title if He Wins

By Al Costello
Post Staff Writer

Harry Jeffra, former bantam and featherweight champion who is on the comeback trail and who hopes to regain the 126-pound title, tonight meets the fourth test in his new lease on life, meeting Johnny Cockfield, former New York featherweight now fighting out of Washington, in the feature match of Joe Turner's card at Turner's Arena, over a 10-round route.

Promised a possible shot at Pittsburgh Jackie Wilson if he triumphs, Jeffra rules a 2 to 1 and 12 to 5 favorite to whip the flashy little Negro who met many of the best featherweights while campaigning in and around New York and who tucked away Jose Domingo Roza in three rounds in his last local appearance. Prior to that, Johnny was knocked out in nine rounds by Danny Petro after twice nearly putting away Danny in one of the most sensational slugging matches of this year's outdoor season.

Managed by Waxman

Jeffra started his comeback several months ago under the managership of the wily Max Waxman, under the tutelage of the veteran and cagey Baltimore trainer, Heinie Blaustein. His first effort was a draw. Then he outstepped Billy Banks here and only several days ago outpointed the clever Davey Crawford at Queensboro Arena, New York.

Not as fast but twice as cagey, the veteran Jeffra showed District fans he has not gone back much, if any, when he whipped Banks decisively here. He went at top speed for eight rounds and was hardly breathing hard at the finish. Never a knockout artist, he showed he still had plenty of ring savvy and could still get around with the graceful ease that was always his prime forte. His left, his best weapon, has hardly grown rusty and was flashing in its old-time skill against the local Negro, who is a fighter of better than average ability.

Date Virtually Assured

Joe Turner has promised a future booking here to Jack (Reverend) Laken, business representative of Jackie Wilson. And if Jeffra wins tonight and looks good doing so, Turner has virtually assured him of the date.

Stoney Lewis and Tee Hubert, two Washington Negro boys, will meet in an eight-round semifinal. Hubert has won his last six straight. Lewis has won five matches out-of-town since his meeting with John Garner last spring here.

B. B. Wright, a newcomer from Pittsburgh with an unbeaten record, will engage George Williams of Wilmington in a six-rounder.

D. C. Table Tennis Title to Fields In Straight Sets

Stanley Fields, formerly Washington's No. 1 ranked-player, swept through the field without the loss of a game yesterday at Columbia to win the D. C. Table Tennis Association championship, defeating Jimmy Shea in the final 21-11, 21-12, 21-12. Tibor Hazi, last year's champion, was unable to defend his crown, unable to secure leave from the Army.

Fields teamed with Shea to win the doubles crown, defeating M. Langsdon and D. Harpham of the Marimnes, 21-19, 21-16, 21-13 in the final round.

N. Y. Dog Wins 'Best' At D. C. Show

El Wendie of Rockland, a fawn boxer, owned by Mr. and Mrs. Philip E. Crystal of the Rye Top Kennels, Harrison, N. Y., captured the highest award in the annual fall show of the National Capital Kennel Club at Meadowbrook yesterday, being designated as the best dog in the show. This was Wendie's third time to win a best-of-show trophy, and she has also scored thrice as best American-bred in other contests.

Handled flawlessly by Nate Levine, the stately boxer won his group in the variety judging and then proceeded to nose out Sirarno's Impertinent Lady, a Kerry Blue, for the show's highest prize.

Dr. John H. Elvin's bulldog, Ch. Kloddy Dixie Doodle, was named the best local dog in the show, while another Elvin entry, Elvinar"s Flying Torpedo, won the Washington Bulldog Club's Futurity in recognition of the puppy's budding talent.

Local dogs generally did well in yesterday's judging, scoring particularly in the obedience classes.

Princess Natatora, Mrs. Steadman Teller's Chesapeake Bay retriever, again won best of breed, as she did in the Saturday show, while a nearby Virginia dog, Capt. H. W. Glassen's English setter, Ch. Blue Dan of Maple Lawn, was tops in his bracket.

[The following editorial appeared originally in the October 1, 1943, issue of The United States News]

And So We Resolve Again---

We have resolved through the Atlantic Charter.

We have resolved through the Mackinac Charter.

We have resolved through the Fulbright resolution.

We have resolved by presidential declaration to establish the "four freedoms"—freedom of speech, freedom of religion, freedom from fear, and freedom from want.

And we have said that there shall be no more war, that aggression shall cease and that righteous nations must band together to enforce the peace by every means at their disposal.

We have resolved again to make a "lasting peace."

But of what avail are these resolutions when the ones we made in the midst of World War I were rendered meaningless after the war?

Anybody drafting a post-war resolution or endeavoring to set up a charter for a world association or organization to maintain peace is respectfully referred to the speeches, resolutions, round-robin petitions, and pledges made by both Republican and Democratic spokesmen in and out of Congress in 1918 and 1919.

Anybody seeking to preserve American sovereignty as against a super-state is respectfully referred to the debates in the Senate preceding the vote on the League of Nations Covenant which was offered as an integral part of the Versailles Treaty.

And anybody wishing to find all the words and the phrases needed to commit the nations of the world—by national or international police force—to respect and preserve the territorial integrity and independence of every country, large and small, need only to read over again Article Ten of that same Covenant of the League of Nations.

We said all that could be said at the end of the last war. We adopted a constitution for the world which had in it every element of moral and physical obligation. The League Covenant remains today as splendid an expression of world idealism and practical collaboration as it was when President Woodrow Wilson submitted it to the Senate in 1919 only to have it rejected by a coalition of Democrats and Republicans though accepted by Britain and France, and, subsequently, by Russia and Germany.

It is not resolutions with high-sounding phrases that we lack.

We need only one word. And that word—translated into actuality—is Character.

Of what avail are resolutions, pledges, promises or virtuous expressions if our elected leaders are not ready as yet to sacrifice the customary political maneuvers of the hour, the personal ambitions, the quest for material gain and the greed for autocratic power which today as yesterday seems to dominate the governments of the principal allies in this war?

We are failing today not in the writing of general resolutions but to be frank about our post-war aims—frank with our own people or with the people of other countries.

Resolutions will not fool anybody—not even the American people who have learned something about foreign policy these last twenty years.

Nor should we be deceived by the cry that America has had no foreign policy for fifty or more years but that the British have had a foreign policy, and that the answer to the world's ills now is a new military and political partnership with Great Britain.

The truth rather is that the American people are not ready to accept imperialism and the British people are not yet ready to abandon imperialism.

We have given ample proof that we stand ready—as we have twice demonstrated—to give our blood to preserve the English-speaking civilization and culture as against militarism and tyranny and dictatorship.

We have gone to war twice now to try to make the world safe for democracy—safe for representative government, safe for nations to trade with one another in good neighborliness and mutual respect.

But what we have not demonstrated—neither we nor the British Governments of the last two decades—is that we have the Character to carry out our pledges, to make our words come true.

Why, for instance, do we persist in telling our own people that the League of Nations Covenant was a failure when it wasn't this document or its resolutions or provisions that failed, but the governments which, due to politics and pacifism at home, refused to support that League—we being the principal shirkers?

Why do we tell our own youth that the trouble last time was that we didn't march to Berlin in 1918, that we didn't drive home the lessons of defeat?

Is that honest?

For anyone who will take the trouble to go back to the files of our newspapers in 1918 will discover that the German Navy was completely defeated and what remained of it was ordered surrendered under the terms of the Armistice. It will be found, moreover, that the German Army was completely demobilized, and Germany was disarmed—forbidden to build big warships or war planes or submarines or to raise armies. A small police force of 100,000 men was all that was permitted Germany, and provision was made for an international commission—on which Britain and France were represented—to inspect and make public reports.

We also declared to the whole world the guilt of the German leaders and wrote this into the Versailles Treaty where all could read it.

These were the words. But what action did we fail to take to make the words mean what they said?

We—that is, the Allies—imposed an impossible reparations burden which the German people could not pay, France took all the raw materials she could extract from Germany as "payment in kind," and we left the struggling republic a ready victim of economic anarchy and chaos so that by 1923 Germany went through her terrible inflation—bankruptcy affecting the assets of 80,000,000 persons.

That was the year Hitlerism won its first victory—not in 1933 when Hitler, as a symbol of a nation's desperate groping for economic equilibrium, assumed actual control. The German people had sunk to the lowest point in economic suffering. Any leader who promised any relief thereafter was welcomed.

And as Hitler saw that Germany needed more territory, needed areas from which raw materials could be stolen, the British and French Governments sat idly by and let him build up a war machine. From 1933 to 1939—during six whole years of Hitler's regime—what did Britain and France and America do? What was behind the failure of Britain and France to see what was happening under their noses? They were close by—after all, we were 3,000 miles away.

Did the British and French resume the building of their own armament so as to enforce the terms of the Versailles Treaty? Did they stop Hitler when he marched into the Rhineland? Or did the British conservatives, anxious to preserve their capital and their trade, join with the British pacifists in ignoring the threat to the world of a new aggressor? Wasn't selfish materialism more important then to the British and to ourselves? Didn't we by action of both houses of Congress in 1935 pass a law, signed by President Roosevelt—just before his second election—which barred the weak democracies from getting arms from our shores? Of what avail are resolutions about world peace when, after winning a great war and disarming the enemy, the same victorious conquerors allow their military forces to disintegrate and refuse to allow their arsenals to be used to meet the threats of tyrants wherever they arise?

Was the British foreign policy in respect to Italian aggression in Ethiopia, in respect to Japanese aggression in Manchuria, in respect to the noble efforts of the loyalists in Spain, a foreign policy which thoughtful Americans approved then or now? Are we asked to accept that kind of Character-less behavior as the basis for a future alliance?

There were in Britain then, as there are today, men of Character who cried out at this chauvinism, who begged for a different distribution of economic resources in the post-war world of the '20's, for a peace built not on hate or revenge but on the Ten Commandments and the Golden Rule—based on tolerance, mutual respect, unselfishness and honesty.

We do not need more resolutions. We need humbleness, penitence, re-examination of our true motives, and the courage to rehabilitate the conquered as well as to restrain the conquerors.

We need, in brief, a dedication to spiritual values and a commitment not just to the words or rituals but to the actual practice of a Christian philosophy.

For the key to Character is to be found in confession of error and re-appraisal of our inner purposes and not in denunciations or hypocritical phrases.

We must honestly recognize that neither we nor the British nor the Russians are the sole proprietors of this world but merely temporary trustees obedient to the will of God. He created human beings everywhere equal—not to live under master rulers or a system of vested privileges. He gave to all persons irrespective of creed or color the right to enjoy freedom of opportunity—the inalienable right to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness.

The Covenant of the League of Nations still lives. It is built into the existing treaty structure of 44 nations. Let the United States ratify that Covenant and pray God to give us the will and the courage to make it at last an effective instrument of international cooperation. For by its provisions, special alliances are expressly forbidden and, instead, the member nations are equally obligated to use all their force and resources as against aggressor states—whether members or non-members—to enforce and maintain the peace of the world.

The Federal Diary

By Jerry Kluttz

Bob Nathan, Ex-WPB, To Leave Army Soon

Bob Nathan, the former War Production Board official and New Deal braintruster who has been a buck private in the Army for the past several months, will be discharged within a few days. He was hospitalized several weeks after he was inducted, and more recently he has been working at the Office of Strategic Services, on loan from the Army.

KLUTTZ

He has had several attractive offers from industry, one from the Committee for Economic Development which is making postwar plans for industry. However, he's slated to be offered a key job in Government to head up a new postwar unit to work out demobilization plans for Uncle Sam.

Uncle Sam has invited three top Civil Service Commission officials to join the Army. They are David Lawton, personnel officer; his assistant, David Williams, and Julius Friedenson, assistant chief examiner, who drafts most of the new rules and regulations for the commission. . . . Senator Aiken of Vermont is sponsoring a bill that would permit Federal workers to retire at full annuities after 30 years' service regardless of age. Some such bill is undoubtedly in Uncle Sam's postwar plans. . . . National Labor Relations Board has asked for $300,000 to conduct employe strike elections under the Connolly-Smith Act. That antistrike act, incidentally, hasn't stopped strikes. Labor people say there are as many now as there were before the law was enacted.

Oscar Cox, Assistant Solicitor General, has been offered the all-important job of general counsel of the new Office of Foreign Economic Administration. He's ideally suited for the job and he's expected to resign his Justice Department post and accept it. Cox doubled as general counsel of Lend-Lease, and his legal talents are sought by Assistant President Jimmy Byrnes, and not infrequently by the President himself. The Administration's knotty legal problems are dropped into his lap. Cox drafted the language that became the lend-lease law when other lawyers said it couldn't be done. If he takes the job with Leo Crowley he'll probably continue as legal adviser to State Undersecretary Edward Stettinius, as the two economic chiefs will have to work together closely.

Some 2000 officers, declared surplus in other Army Service Force divisions, have been ordered absorbed by the Corps of Engineers. Ninety-six per cent of the Treasury Building guards get $1500 base pay. The war bond quota of the 128 men and women was $4280 but they purchased $8125 worth . . . United Federal Workers has called on the Civil Service Commission to stop its "witch-hunting." In a letter to the commission, the union said: "In case after case, investigators indicate that they consider union activity, racial tolerance, and opposition to fascism as subversive and un-American. This attitude must appear to the most calm and rational person as a Fascist attitude." The union calls for the firing of investigators who are alleged to have asked the objectionable questions . . .

The Comptroller General has decided the War Department can't pay the costs of a barbecue for employes of a cost-plus-a-fixed fee contractor down in Georgia. The contractor said the barbecue was necessary to maintain proper morale and spirit. . AGO employes will hold a series of monthly dances, the first on Saturday night at 2400 16th st. The dances are sponsored by the employe counsellors. . . . Milton Rygh is conducting supervisor training courses at the Agriculture Department. He's on the Civil Service staff. . . Civil Service needs auto and truck mechanics.

Steps toward overhauling the entire Civil Service system is gaining support on Capitol Hill. Representative Gale, Minnesota Republican and a member of the House Civil Service Committee, believes now is the best time—when manpower is short—to take a good look at all the laws, rules and regulations governing Civil Service employes. Gale doesn't see much point in trying to plug up one hole at a time when there is so much to be done. What Gale has to say makes sense, as the Government is being administered by laws conceived in peace and we're trying to apply those rules and all the red tape to wartime conditions.

Gale believes that Congress would be willing to reorganize the Federal setup if it can be shown it would save manpower, reduce red tape, and bring about more efficient methods. And we all admit there's room for improvement. It hasn't been announced, but a blueprint for overhauling the system is in its first stage, and I predict we'll be hearing much about it in the months ahead. The Classification Act, for example, is one instrument overripe for discard. It was first written in 1923 and it's piled up with amendments and exceptions of various sorts. Congress fixed salaries for jobs in 1923 that still stand today. A modernized Classification Act would be worth all the work involved.

Nonessential 'Industry'

Lawrence A. Knight, 18, of 1813 North Capitol st. told police that a man stopped him at North Capitol st. and Rhode Island ave. yesterday morning and asked to see his draft registration card. Knight said he handed the man a wallet containing the card; that the man snatched $20 out of the wallet and fled.

And No Red Coupons Given . . .

A thief who ransacked a grocery store at 2604 Wade rd. se. Saturday night shouldn't have any meat-rationing worries for a while. Reported stolen from the store, operated by Elmon Fisher, 5212 Ames st. ne., were 15 pounds of bacon, three smoked shoulders, four hams, four boxes of half-smoked sausage and 25 chickens.

N. Y. Cleric Cites Need Of Decency

Trend to Include Topic in Political Matters Heartens Msgr. McClafferty

The need of decency in the affairs of men and nations was stressed yesterday by the Very Rev. Msgr. John J. McClafferty, in a radio address over N. B. C.

Monsignor McClafferty, executive secretary of the National League of Decency, New York City, delivered the fifth in a series of nine addresses on "The Church in Action," under the auspices of the National Catholic Hour and the National Council of Catholic Men.

"It is heartening that statesmen talk about decency in the affairs of Nations," said the speaker, "and that they appear really to be interested in the furtherance of decency in human affairs. They and the people for whom they hold the trust are being sorely tried by the evils which indecencies have spawned upon the world.

"The Church has had, has, and will have until the Church militant has gained the final crown, a real true concern with decency in all the thoughts, words, actions, and affairs of men. The Church would have been decent in international dealings, decent in national affairs, decent in civic, social, and economic relations, decent in family life, and decent in recreational and cultural pursuits. In fine, the Church would have man decent in all his relationships, would have man always and in all things live in accord with the high calling of his dignity and destiny."

"Righteousness must prevail" in all postwar relations if the mistakes following the last war are to be averted, Chaplain Merritt F. Williams said yesterday at the Washington Cathedral from which he is on leave as canon for the duration. He was chaplain on the sunken Carrier Wasp, and is now an instructor in the Navy Chaplains Training School at Williamsburg, Va.

The return of exiles to their homelands after this war will create manifold problems, which can best be solved through the use of Christian principles by those in political, military and economic power, he said.

Archbishop Athenagoras Lauds Russia

Athenagoras

The Archbishop celebrated solemn high mass in the morning at the Greek Orthodox Church of Sts. Constantine and Helen, Sixth and C sts. sw., of which Father Thomas Daniels is pastor, and spoke over WOL in the afternoon. In his radio address, he said:

"The encyclical of the Patriarch of Moscow Sergius to the Russian people to unite and defend the country against the Germans, "honored him and greatly contributed to the Russian miracle.

"His election as patriarch, his official recognition and installation according to the old ecclesiastical order, is the vindication of the martyrdom of the Russian Church and people, and the assertion of the truth that religion is indestructible.

"So now a true crusade is being carried out against nazism, and we are proud that the children of Christian America, under the leadership of our pious President, are in the vanguard of this crusade."

The church leader revealed that in November, 1933, when a treaty was signed here recognizing Soviet Russia, he visited President Roosevelt, and "begged him to ask protection for the Russian Church."

WAC Luncheon Today

An Army mess luncheon will be given at Fort Myer WAC Headquarters today for members of the women's army and the Civilian Executive Committee, which is in charge of the WAC recruiting drive in the District.

The ten-week campaign to recruit 350 WACS in Washington opened a week ago. Plans to raise the local quota will be made at the luncheon.

Cossack Chorus Here

Four new songs of Soviet Russia will be sung by the Gen. Platoff Don Cossack Chorus in the opening recital of the Cappel Concert series at Constitution Hall tomorrow at 8:30 p. m.

To be climaxed by Cossack dances, the program will include "Song of the Nations" by Shostakovitch, "Song of the Plains," by Knipper, "Beloved City," by Bogoslavsky, and "Katusha," a folk song.

Soldier Show Cast Uses New Service Hotel

The United Nations Service Center, formerly the Capitol Park Hotel, opened last night as a serviceman's center with the arrival of soldiers comprising the cast and staff of the Army show, "Army Play by Play," which opens tonight at the National Theater.

Appreciation of the facilities was expressed by Capt. John J. Morrissey, director in charge of the production, who told how in some other cities prices for rooms ranged from $3.50 to $5.

"When you figure that these soldiers are allowed $2.75 per day expenses to take care of their rooms and meals, you can see what a tough problem they faced," he said.

The hotel was opened to the men as a special concession and the official welcoming of servicemen and their families will not take place until later this month, as the center still is being renovated.

The Army show, Captain Morrissey explained, is exactly the kind of entertainment put on by the troops themselves at various posts.

The plays were picked in a prize contest for one-act plays by enlisted men. John Golden, theatrical producer, offered the prizes, and of 115 plays submitted, five were selected for the show.

Capt. Anthony J. Kolgen is in command of the unit. Production assistants are Sergt. Alex Kahn, Pvt. Milton Stern, and Pvt. Henning Irgens.

Wallace Sees Reduction in British Output

Vice President Henry A. Wallace last night predicted a slump soon in British production of war goods but at the same time asserted that the step-up in American production would more than offset it.

The predictions were made at the Stage Door Canteen, where the Vice President cut the last of the Anniversary cakes to be served to servicemen during the first anniversary week observance at the Canteen.

Brock Pemberton, New York producer, and Jay Owen, WOL announcer, acted as masters of ceremonies. Celeste Holm, star of the Broadway hit, "Oklahoma," and Barry Wood of "Hit Parade" furnished entertainment. The Navy School of Music dance band and the Military District of Washington Dance Band played.

Vice President Wallace told the servicemen that he had talked to a person well informed on British matters yesterday and he had been told that as the result of the long hours and continuous work weeks the workmen had undergone in Britain, it was expected they would naturally go into a slump and that production would drop. It was then he asserted that increased production in America would more than offset the drop.

Boy Scouts Aid War

Boy Scouts of Troop 64, Bellevue, D. C., gave $18.75 to the Government outright in the Third War Loan Drive, their scoutmaster, Gerald B. Rioux, reported yesterday. The boys raised the money by collecting scrap.

D. C. Auxiliary Firemen Set Pump Record

Auxiliary firemen of Washington set a national record yesterday in operating pumps that sprayed a curtain of water 100 feet above the Tidal Basin.

The 400 volunteer firemen, workers in Government, business, finance, and the professions, who had devoted 150 leisure hours each to learning methods of fighting fires caused by air raids or sabotage, stood staunchly by the high pressure pumps that caused two casualties yesterday in their force.

Clad in blue coats, white helmets and high rubber boots, the auxiliary firemen were on duty in front of 31 pump trucks, donated by milk companies, department stores and bakeries, and 69 trailer pumps loaned by the Office fo Civilian Defense.

Three hose lines were attached to each of the 100 pumps, all of them combining to fling out 50,000 gallons a minute during the 40-minute demonstration.

An estimated throng of 5000 spectators stood back of the firemen and crowded on a nearby bridge to observe the spectacle which opened the observance here of Fire Prevention Week. Occasionally, water from an unmanageable pump sprayed the watchers but they took it good naturedly.

Battalion Chief C. S. Peterson, ruddy-faced boss of the auxiliaries who smiled approval as the largest assembly of pumps manned by volunteer firemen in the country staged the aquatic feat. He commented:

"The OCD told us that the national record had been set with 64 pumps in Detroit. I said the auxiliary firemen of Washington could beat them. Judging by their excellent performance today, I feel that these volunteer firemen could adequately protect the Capital against fires caused by air raid or other war emergencies."

Yesterday's first casualty occurred before the demonstration was opened. G. F. Van Pelt, 32, an employe of the General Accounting Office of the Federal Government, was thrown against the bumper of a truck by the pressure from the hose which he was directing for Auxiliary Engine Company 20. He was rushed to Emergency Hospital in a Rescue Squad ambulance of the Fire Department and treated for fractured ribs.

Nester Delevaux of 1755 Q st. nw., a native of Switzerland who became a citizen earlie rthis year and has devoted most of his spare time to civilian defense activities, was thrown into the Tidal Basin by his pump. After he was rescued by Capt. M. F. Abbot:, an auxiliary of Engine Company 9, Delevaux commented sadly:

"I had been looking forward to this big day and then I pull a stunt like this."

He poured water from his boots, shook his head regretfully, and climbed into a truck to return home before the demonstration had begun.

Two Traffic Victims

Granville Queen, 4, Negro of 4653 Hayes st. ne., run over by an auto while playing in front of his home Saturday, remained in a critical condition at Gallinger Hospital last night. Police reported the car was driven by Thomas F. Matthews, 22, Negro of 1118 50th st. ne.

Robert Darr, 14, of 1435 Maryland ave. ne., remained in Casualty Hospital last night with injuries suffered when he ran from between parked cars in the 600 block of Florence st. ne., Saturday night and was hit by a car, driven, police said, by Antonio Cantena, 1219 G st. ne.

Big Garage Held by U. S. Stays Empty

Centrally Located Capital Structure Has Been in Federal Custody Six Weeks

By Linton Burkett
Post Staff Writer

A chilly October wind moaned dismally yesterday through the cavernous—and empty—depths of the Capital Garage, 1312 New York ave. nw., as a lone guard stood sentry over the car-less spaces.

For six weeks the building has been in the custody of the Public Buildings Administration and allocated to the use of the Federal Works Agency.

At one time during this period, according to an informal, it housed all of 10 cars, with the remainder of its 1290 parking spaces deserted as a ghost town of the old West.

A gasoline pump stands ready to service the phantoms of cars that are not there. During week days attendants have been employed to service Government cars with oil and gas—that are not there.

Winds sweeping through the empty floors have obliterated the once familiar engine exhaust fumes. The hollow ring of the guards' footsteps echoes and re-echoes from concrete walls.

Low ramps leading to the upper floors prevent its use for storing big trucks. Drivers of other Government-owned cars find it inconvenient to their offices, although it is close to the heart of the shopping district.

A spokesman said that he understood that some other agencies had indicated willingness to make use of the huge storage facilities but he did not know whether this had been arranged.

Another spokesman familiar with Government-car ownership asserted that all the combined agencies in Washington did not have 1300 cars, so there will be spacious parking space there for any Government car user who desires to use it, always.

A chilly October wind moaned dismally yesterday through the cavernous depths.

Mass Opens Catholic U. School Year

Signalizing the formal opening of Catholic University's 1943-44 academic year, a solemn high mass of the Holy Spirit was celebrated yesterday in the National Shrine of the Immaculate Conception on the campus. Members of the faculty, the student body and superiors and members of several religious communities of the institution attended.

Faculty members followed the traditional custom of making their profession of faith at the conclusion of the mass, celebrated by the Very Rev. Dr. Louis A. Arand, S. S., president of the University's Divinity College.

Delivering the sermon, the Right Rev. Msgr. Patrick J. McCormick, university rector, said in part:

"We are solemnly and formally opening our academic year with the celebration of Holy Mass, invoking the light of the Holy Ghost on the work of the year. As on the opening Sunday a year ago, we begin the school year with our country at war. Looking back we can realize how greatly higher education has been affected by this war, and how much more advanced the colleges and universities are today in wartime activities than they were a year ago.

"What was then a matter of plan and design to use the facilities of colleges and universities to promote the war effort has become a reality, and a large part of the work of colleges and universities this year will be definitely shaped in accordance with accelerated programs for expediting the training of young men before entering the armed forces and with programs of training for those already in the Army and Navy or other branches of the service."

Sen. O'Mahoney Urges State, Local Postwar Projects

Sen. Joseph C. O'Mahoney (Democrat) of Wyoming, declared last night domestic postwar plans should be directed toward revival of State and local enterprises, and "full employment of labor at good wages."

"Suggestions for anything resembling a work relief program in the postwar era seem to me to be wholly sterile," he declared.

O'Mahoney is chairman of a subcommittee on industrial reorganization of the Senate Postwar Committee, and will report to the committee in 10 days on an inquiry in Pacific Coast States during the recess.

A major postwar problem, he said, is the extent to which the Nation's economy can convert from war to peace conditions without Government aid.

50,000 Attend Protestant Communion Sunday Services

The Post Church Editor

An estimated 50,000 Protestant communicants in the Washington Metropolitan area yesterday "broke the bread" and "lifted the cup" and found spiritual unity with Christian brethren everywhere, as World Wide Communion Sunday was observed.

Christ's followers in Army camps and naval bases, on shipboard, in majestic cathedrals and humble chapels joined in the observance as urged by the Federal Council of Churches of Christ, New York City, central body of American Protestantism.

Symbolizing the global aspects of the observance, clergymen of French and Chinese backgrounds participated in Communion at First Congregational Church, 15th and G sts. nw. They were Dr. Florian Vurpillot, pastor emeritus of the Washington French Congregation, and Dr. C. C. Hung, pastor of the Chinese Community Church.

Presbyterian Rededication

Fifteenth Street Presbyterian Church, 15th and R sts. nw., one of the city's leading Negro congregations, marked the occasion by rededicating its renovated church edifice. Dr Halley B. Taylor, pastor, and former moderator of the Washington City Presbytery, celebrated Holy Communion.

Later in the day, the ladies' aid society sponsored a memorial service for Mrs. Marie Ravennah Taylor, late wife of the pastor, and presented a commemorative gift to the church. Several of the city's religious figures will address a meeting Thursday at 8 p. m. as another feature of "rededication week."

Coinciding with the celebration of World Wide Communion Sunday was the opening of services in the new combination chapel and recreational hall at Bolling Field. The Protestant service was at 9:30 a. m., and the Catholic service at 11 a. m. Jewish rites are planned for this week, the time to be announced later.

Uniforms Dot Congregations

The crowds of worshipers taking communion either in pews or at communion rails, according to denominational custom, were dotted with uniforms of the Army, Navy, Marines, WAVES, WACS, SPARS and other service branches.

At Takoma Lutheran Church, 7th and Dahlia sts. nw., servicemen's families went first to the communion rail to spirtually recall Christ's supreme sacrifice, and to pray for their kin on the fighting fronts. A number of servicemen on leave communed with families. The Rev. J. Adrian Pfeiffer, pastor, was celebrant.

Victory Sidelights

New Monitors for Buildings To Serve in Next Air-Raid Test

Newly created monitors, who will serve under building wardens although they require no certification, will participate in the District's next air raid test, Sylvan King, assistant chief warden in charge of commercial and industrial establishments, annuonced yesterday.

At the same time it was reported that wardens serving in large buildings, including apartments and private schools, may now qualify for civilian defense warden service in a shortened 6-hour course. Indoor wardens and monitors may both wear the CD armband.

The OCD regulations were relaxed to provide more ample protection for large buildings, King said.

As there has never been an accurate count of "indoor wardens," each area is meanwhile conducting a survey of protective personnel in buildings.

Postwar U. S. Workers

Postwar problems of Federal employes will be considered at a conference of the executive council of the National Federation of Federal Employes at 10 Independence ave. sw., beginning today. The council will also act on the legislative program of the federation, with special emphasis on personnel problems arising out of the war.

'Back the Attack' Losses

Celebrities to Ride

Transportation of celebrities here to entertain servicemen has been added to the duties of the D. C. Red Cross Motor Corps, Mrs. William Leahy, chairman, announced yesterday.

First assignment under the new detail will be driving Rudy Vallee and his band, which will be featured in war bond rallies at the Earle and Capitol Theaters, from Union station to their hotels today.

Meanwhile, an appeal for volunteers was issued by Mrs. Leahy. Those interested in joining the motor Corps may call Republic 8300, extension 225.

City News in Brief

Twenty congressional page boys, lonesome youth's scattered about the Capital in borading houses, were still looking for a house yesterday where they can all live together in "fraternity style," Ernest L. Kendall, principal of the page boys' school at the Capitol, said last night.

The page boys have asked the War Housing Center, 1400 Pennsylvania ave. nw., to find them a large house near the Capitol in which they can study together, play together and enjoy meals that fit into their unusual schedule of work and schooling.

The house must be large enough for study rooms, bedrooms and a large dining room. Supervision of the boys' lives would be possible under the proposed setup instead of leaving them entirely on their own in impersonal boarding houses as in the present circumstances.

Industrial Training

A "Training Within Industry" program will be presented to members of the National Association of Power Engineers and National Progressive Power Engineers tomorrow at 8 p. m in the Willard Hotel in speeches by Charles L. Smith and Joseph A. Babear, WMC representatives.

Citizens' Election

House Group To Study 22 District Bills

Plan for Election Of D. C. Delegates To Party Conventions Will Be Considered

The House District Committee's judiciary subcommittee today will consider 22 local bills, including the D'Alesandro measure to provide for popular election of Washington delegates to national political conventions. The hearing was called by Representative McGehee (Democrat) of Mississippi, chairman of the subcommittee.

Also slated for study are bills seeking amendments of liquor, property, traffic and birth registration regulations. The delegate bill would displace the current practice of selection of convention representatives by local party organizations.

Chairman Randolph of the District Committee is the sponsor of several of bills, including one to permit granting of beverage licenses to local service clubs. Another would permit members of the armed forces of other United Nations to import alcoholic beverages.

Prohibition Bill Up

Other liquor bills up for action include one introduced by Representative West (Democrat) of Texas to direct the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board to establish and maintain Government liquor stores here. Representative Guyer (Republican) of Kansas is sponsor of a liquor prohibition bill, while Representative Randolph seeks amendment of traffic regulations, prohibiting persons "under the influence" from operating "any vehicle" in the District and imposing penalties therefor.

Other bills under Randolph's sponsorship ask amendment of the law relating to carrying of concealed weapons, allowance of additional property acquired by the District to be used temporarily for parking; authorization of birth registration after the time of birth, and another concerns assignment of wages and the advance payment of salaries to prevent attachment or garnishment.

Other Bills Pending

Representative Bradley (Republican) of Michigan and Representative Burdick (Republican) of North Dakota have antivivisection bills pending, while Bradley also has a bill for residential rezoning of property at the southwest corner of 16th and Shepherd sts. nw., and at the northeast cornr of 16th st. and Arkansas ave. nw.

The subcommittee will also consider bills relating to regulation and licensing of professional engineers, sale of rockfish, transfer of property of the Frederick Douglas Memorial and historical association to the National Association of Colored Women and guarantee that all Washingtonians have equal privileges in public places.

Dr. Goldstein Greets British On Holy Day

Dr. Israel Goldstein, president of the Zionist Organization of America and of the Synagogue Council of America, yesterday extended High Holy Day greetings to Britain's Jewish community in a radio broadcast.

Speaking over the facilities of the British Broadcasting Co. as part of a High Holy Day program arranged in the British Isles, Dr. Goldstein declared, in part:

"We American Jews cannot permit the new year to pass by without reiterating, as Americans and as Jews, our deep respect and profound gratitude to you of the British Isles for the spiritual power which enabled you to withstand the physical might of a mighty foe and thereby to save our civilization and yours, which are the same."

Affirming "our sense of kinship with you in this world-shaking era of human history," the speaker added that "today the road ahead, though not a short and easy one, points to sure and overwhelming victory. But never shall we forget the days when you, and you alone, were the ramparts of civilization."

Jewish devout are now observing the ten days' period of prayer and penitence that began with the Rosh Hashana, the Jewish New Year 5704, last Wednesday at sundown, and ends with Yom Kippur—day of atonement—starting Friday at sundown.

Dr. Pazos to Speak

Very Happy, Completely Trusting Wife Asks How To Win Her Dearly-Loved Husband From Candid Habit of Flirting With Girls in Single-Man Guise

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: My husband and I have been very happily maried for two years. He is an officer in the armed forces, and when he was transferred to Washington, I joined him. We have been going to the Officers' Club dances and by mutual consent we do pretty much as we please after we get there. He gets me started on the dance floor and after I have been tagged he goes off on his own. He tries to see that I don't get "stuck" with anyone, but since we have gone so often, I have become acquainted with several unattached men who frequent the dances and usually he doesn't have to worry about me.

Now, my problem is: I don't care how much he harmlessly flirts with the girls; but I do wish he would tell them he is married. He never does. For instance: One night I thought he was "stuck," and thinking to help him out of his situation, I walked over and asked him for my compact from his pocket. He invited me to sit down and have a drink with them. He introduced us just by first names, and a kick under the table let me know he hadn't told the girl he was married The three of us sat and talked a few minutes; and then he asked the other girl to dance again. On the floor, he told her I was his date for the evening; and she asked him up to her house for dinner the following Sunday. It was an awkward situation, but he still didn't tell her he was married.

One Innocent Maiden Plans to Visit Him

For another instance: Before he was assigned to Washington, he got himself into a pretty mess,—that he isn't out of yet,—with a young girl in another town. It started when his commanding officer accepted an invitation for the two of them to Sunday dinner. After enjoying her invitation once without telling her he was married, my husband didn't know how to refuse the second invitation. After that, he was lost; because he got to liking the girl too much to hurt her feelings. Consequently, the girl writes to him and tells him she is getting off work to come to Washington to see him. If she comes, he wants me to stay out of the picture until he has a chance to tell her he is married.

I think he would save her pride more by writing to tell her he is married, rather than let her come to Washington and then find out. I know he wants to see her, which is probably the reason why he doesn't write the bad news. My girl friend suggested that I write to her myself, but I don't want to do that. I have never done anything behind my husband's back and I don't want to start now. She was very kind to him while he was stationed in her town; and she really is a very lovely, wholesome girl, judging from all he has told me about her. He knows she wouldn't even speak to him if she thought he was married; and I feel she is too fine to be an object of petty jealousy. I am trying to look at it from her angle, and I think my husband is giving her a pretty raw deal.

This habit of his, of avoiding telling a girl he is married has put me in embarrassing situations more than once. The problem isn't very serious. But I feel it could develop distrust. I love my husband very much and I don't want to ever stop trusting him implicitly. I should like to know how to handle it,—so as to avoid any really serious situations later on. W. D. G.

This Juvenile Behavior Paves Way to Divorce

DEAR W. D. G.: Your marriage is drifting slowly toward disaster because neither you nor your husband has brought to the relationship a mature concept of what marriage "is all about." You are deporting yourselves in that relationship as though you had casually paired off for a perennial hay ride, during which ride each of you considers it "the thing" to imply that there are no strings attaching him to you and vice versa; and that therefore, you are free (so far as each other is concerned) to dally in any direction your fancy chooses, as you go along. Measured by norm standards of behavior,—as established by psychological research and definition,—your husband's blithely irregular conduct as cited is definitely juvenile; and so is your excessively tolerant accommodation to it, as well as your two-of-a-kind (though more restrained) aping of it.

But to say that it is juvenile conduct is by no means to refer to it in terms of mild expostulation,—such as elders oft direct at giddy teen-age youth. Such behavior, in marriage, is very dangerous. "It is the stuff of which divorces are made,—" says a psychiatrist with whom I have discussed your story. It is a repudiation of all that true marriage is; and of all that it must be, if it is to endure and pay any dividends. It is treason and underground sabotage committed against the state of matrimony;—of which state it may truly be said, "United we stand and divided we fall." Thus, it is high time you took serious joint account of whither you are drifting, and why,—i. e., because of your shared adolescent attitude,—and resolved to save yourselves from the shipwreck that surely lies ahead on the present course, by settling on a consistent policy of mature-minded married behavior from here on out.

To Save His Marriage, Man Must Face Truth

You may ask: What is mature behavior? It is conduct which reflects a reasonably full development of an understanding, responsible, integrated attitude toward society in general; and, in addition, an actively discriminative attitude toward one's personal relationships in particular. To be specific in regard to your situation: It means cutting out the pseudo-blase, independent operator, bachelor and adventuress performance at parties; and letting the world see, by your special consideration and preference for each other, that you do proudly belong to each other. And it means, for you, looking at your husband with dispassionately reproving eye, and speaking up to him with objective, lucidly argued disapproval,—firmly and finally stated,—when he brings you reports of his confetti-value conquests, deceptively achieved. And finally, it means, for your husband, digesting the fact (1) that his current mode of "single blade" behavior cannot be honestly and honorably explained away as harmless fun; and (2) that he must face the unpleasant truth of its real significance and revise his conduct accordingly, if (3) he values his marriage and your lasting implicit trust. Good Strong Feet Are in Minority

By Logan Clendenning, M.D.

I suppose if the surgeon-general of the Army were to be asked what kind of recruits he could most wish for, he might very well answer, "Those with good strong feet." Of course, he wants other features too—good eyes and ears and sound lungs and minds, but after, getting into training more soldiers probably are disabled for foot trouble than any one thing. If you hear your boy or your pal in the Army has been hospitalized, the chances are that it is not as likely to be something fatal as that he is being treated for foot trouble.

As Capt. Alfred S. Stevenson of the Medical Corps, says, "In spite of mechanized warfare and its implied changes in methods of locomotion, a soldier still marches as much on his feet as on his stomach."

If one were to look for actual examples of the ideal human foot, there are very few places on the earth's surface where he could go and be certain of finding them.

Different Types of Feet

In the "Hall of Races of Mankind" in the Field Museum of Natural History in Chicago, are bronze models of the feet of an Hawaiian surf rider, of a Chinese coolie, and of a Tamil tree climber and these indicate some of those few places.

The Hawaiian's foot is muscular, but not very heavy, making it ideal for swimming. The Chinese coolie's foot is broad, heavy and of great strength, showing power and endurance. It rests on the ground like a great, solid pedestal. The tree-climber's foot, while strong, has special adaptations, the big toe being almost prehensile.

The notable feature is that all these are feet that have never known the shoe of modern civilized man. The Chinese woman of the upper class used to be compelled to have her feet bandaged until they had assumed a deformity so that she could hardly hobble. Quoting Captain Stevenson again, "To a lesser degree the deformities seen in many of the feet of military recruits are examples of adaptations to Occidental social customs and styles."

When one turns from the rare actual examples of ideal feet in the human family and begins to formulate what the ideal human foot should be in terms of anatomical structure and functional stress, it is no wonder the foot so often gets out of whack.

Bones of Foot

The foot consists of 26 bones. These bones are mostly small, have a number of facets which, when exactly approximated, form a double arch—one going from side to side along the base of the toes. The other, from front to back. Man is the only living animal which has a longitudinal arch (back to front)—an adaptation due to assuming the erect position.

These bones and arches are all moved and maintained by muscles, most of which have long pulleys, being located in the calves of the leg. That is why when you have been walking a long time the calves begin to hurt first.

With all these contrivances and the different movements and strains the foot undergoes in walking and standing, it is no wonder, as I say, that the foot often gets out of whack. This tendency is certainly aggravated by many forms of footwear. We will take up that subject in our article tomorrow.

THE GENTLER SEX

Vitamin World

By Malvina Lindsay

What would a ragged Continental of the Revolution have thought could he have seen the wartime nutrition exhibit presented by the District of Columbia Medical Society in connection with its annual scientific assembly last week? How would a Civil War soldier who had foraged for most of his rations have looked at it? Or even an American doughboy of 1918 with his corn willie and hardtack? And how completely mystifying it would have been to all the women rated "best cooks" in their neighborhoods a couple of decades ago!

The old promise of a "meal in a pill" almost coming true in the scientifically packaged Army field rations . . . appetizing and balanced meals of the best food the Nation has to offer for the men in camp . . . dehydrated and compressed foods for shipments overseas . . . and vitamins, vitamins everywhere, in big black letters on wall charts, written about in pamphlets, dramatized in the fortunes and misfortunes of white rats in movies.

Here was the Army, the Navy, the Department of Agriculture, the American Medical Association, the University of Maryland and half a dozen other important bodies, as well as insurance companies and commercial firms, all preaching sermons on food and vitamins. Visitors surfeited with lunch were ready in a short time to rush to the nearest restaurant and order large meals of liver and carrots.

We 'Fly Better Than We Eat'

Revolutionary ghosts had they hovered about would have thought Utopia had arrived in the United States. Visitors in the flesh did complacently reflect on what a wonderfully smart Nation this was—until their egos were deflated by Dr. Walter Wilkins, nutrition specialist of the United States Public Health Service.

Despite all this apparent progress, nutrition has lagged in this country, says Dr. Wilkins, who thinks we "fly better than we eat." Both aviation and nutrition were in their infancy 40 years ago, he points out, and look where aviation has gone! He asks, "Why have we been so slow to use what we have learned about nutrition?" Also, why have we left the astounding discoveries in nutrition to gather dust in textbooks and to be enjoyed by white rats in laboratories?

One explanation is that we dislike to break old food habits. Here again it is the old story of resistance to knowledge. Even at this exhibit, visitors were heard to remark," Well look at our mothers and grandmothers. They didn't know anything about vitamins and they got along better than we do." Did they? The statement is open to question. However, despite this Nation's past lassitude regarding nutrition the war has brought a general awakening along that line, especially to women.

Factory Workers Better Fed

Not only are the fighting men benefiting from discoveries in nutrition but also the people at home. Motion pictures at the exhibit showed how the old cold succeeded in factories by hot lunch in the dinner pail has been meals, often at the factory's expense. They showed plants where free milk was distributed to workers any time of the day on request. They showed children in nurseries and schools getting hot properly balanced meals. They showed the vitamin conscious housewife, who has succeeded the neighborhood "best cook," devoting her attention to making vegetables palatable instead of turning out a prize butter-pecan pie.

One fact emphasized in the exhibits and talks was that further changes in American food habits must be expected and that women, in order to meet them, would need a working knowledge of nutrition. Also as food demands grow throughout the world, the American housewife will face further challenges. She will have to do more with less. She will have to save more. She will have to know more. Even the end of the war will give her no chance to return to her old ruts. She will have to meet the needs of returning servicemen many of whom have eaten better than ever before in their lives under Uncle Sam's auspices and who at least have become conscious they are living in a vitamin world.

Your Baby And Mine

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

To the necessity to be economical with all of her possessions the mother of growing children must add the confusion of buying a shoe that is long enough and wide enough to last as long as shoes must last these days.

Since it is quite possible for a child's foot to lengthen one-half inch in six weeks, this becomes a minor tragedy when the new shoes become too small.

The habit of passing on half-worn shoes to another child is not always as desirable as it sounds. Each child's foot has its own personal pattern and the impression it makes in shoes cannot possibly fit the pattern of another child's foot. This makes for those painful blemishes which ill become the tender feet of children.

Mrs. J. N. feels her niece is making the mistake of buying too large a shoe for her daughter.

"She is an adorable child but her mother buys shoes which are one inch too long for her. The child falls frequently and complains of leg pains. She wore half-shoes this summer and they were so large they fell off even when laced.

"The child is 3 but looks as if she had abnormally large feet. This is not a matter of economy as everyone in the family gladly contributes toward her shoes. What do you think?"

Every child should be fitted with new shoes which are ¾ inch larger than the standing length of the foot. And wide enough, too, so that the foot has ample room for spreading out. All children look as if their feet were much too long for their skinny legs when they put on new, stiff shoes.

The leg pains could be of serious import, so I would not attribute those to long shoes but have a physical examination by a pediatrician to determine the real cause.

I am guessing, too, that the mother is making a poor selection of shoes for a child of this age who should wear high, laced shoes, made with thick, soft, flexible soles. There are many types which make the foot look shorter than others. A low shoe is not suitable to a child under 4½ or 5 years as it it does just what you have described, slips off or all around on the foot giving no protection to it. The high shoes are the sensible ones for growing children.

Our leaflet, "Winter and Summer Dress," discusses children's shoes. It may be had by sending a 3-cent stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request to Myrtle Meyer Eldred in care of this newspaper.

Martha Ellyn's Platter Chatter

The Burger family have come into great prominence. Previous to food rationing some persons considered them only on occasion. They thought they were good when bought at a roadside stand, or cooked out in the open when on a picnic.

Martha Ellyn

Now, that they are becoming acquainted with the burgers because of necessity they hold them in high esteem. Many cooks have discovered that there is more than one kind of burger. They can be made from ground beef, lamb, pork, ham, or even fresh pork sausage.

One pound of any of these kinds of meat will serve four persons. If you extend the meat in various ways such as casseroles or loaves, they can serve five or six persons.

Let's consider the beef burgers. The juiciest ones are made from ground meat from the chuck, plate or neck. The round and flank cuts are so lean that burgers made from them will be dry unless extra fat is added.

Patties made from ground chuck, placed on toasted buns and served with cheese sauce poured over them are sure to be a treat to hungry ones. Another fine way to use ground beef is to form patties by combining the beef with pork sausage and egg and placing two patties on either side of a slice of cored apple. Then broil on both sides until the patties are browned, then popped into the oven until the apples are tender and the meat is just right.

Lamb and veal burgers are best when made from ground shoulder or breast meat. Be sure to try ground lamb in the form of little porcupine balls, served with a zestful sauce.

Hamburgers are excellent when made from ground ham shank meat which gives the same fine flavor of center cut ham slices, yet costs much less in both points and money. For extra flavor, combine ground pork shoulder meat with any of the other ground meats to make juicy loaves or big round patties.

A platter such as pictured here, onion slices topped with well-seasoned burgers, surrounded with green beans, provides a substantial and attractive food

The biggest, most tender burgers can be made by shaping the meat lightly instead of squeezing it. Remember too, broil or pan fry the meat only as long as it takes to cook them through, using low temperature to prevent shrinkage. One of the best ways to make the meat stick together is to use undiluted milk. Add seasonings to the milk. This is better than using eggs and crumbs since they have a tendency to toughen the meat.

But don't just cook a burger, slap it on a serving plate and present it to the diners. Use some imagination. The following is a suggested menu using beef burgers.

Dinner Menu

Beef Burgers on Onion Slices
Frenched Green Beans
Calavo-Grapefruit Salad
Enriched Bread Butter
Custard With Peaches
Beverage

If you want to make your chopped meat into something extra fine try the following recipe for making individual loaves:

BARBECUED BEEF LOAVES

Mix ½ cup fine dry bread crumbs, ½ cup evaporated milk, 2 teaspoons salt and ⅛ teaspoon pepper. Add 1½ pounds ground beef chuck, ½ pound ground lean pork and 2 tablespoons chopped onion, blending well. Shape into eight individual oblong meat loaves and place in shallow pan. Make a barbecue sauce by heating together ½ cup catsup, 1/3 cup vinegar, 1 tablespoon Worcestershire sauce, 1 teaspoon chili powder and 2 tablespoons chopped onion. Pour over the loaves and bake 45 minutes at 350 degress F., basting once or twice. Makes eight servings.

If you want to use ground lamb make some porcupines. The meat is combined with rice so a little goes a long way.

LAMB PORCUPINES

Brown ½ clove chopped garlic in butter or margarine. Mix 2 pounds ground lamb shoulder with ½ cup raw rice and 1 teaspoon salt and shape in balls. Brown in the same fat. Pour 2 cups boiling water over balls and simmer 1 hour. Remove balls and add 3 tablespoons flour, 1 teaspoon salt and ¼ teaspoon pepper. Mix thoroughly with remaining fat. Add 2 cups milk and cook until it thickens. Place balls in sauce to serve. Six servings.

Fun, Food and Women

Maybe you haven't noticed it, but these three essential elements are easily located in Washington—and they aren't G. I. either. So stop complaining about being stuck at a desk (or on top of a building), far from the fighting fronts where big things are going on. Even such a cloud as being stationed in the Nation's Capital has a silver lining—in this case, the "lining" is the hospitable hand which Washington is forever holding out to you.

If your enjoyment of the lesser things of life is relegated to weekends, they can at least be big weekends—and practically no money is involved, no-how! On Friday night, for instance (if your weekends are long ones) you'll find recreational games going in full swing at Roosevelt Center, 13th and Upshur sts. nw. Or if you prefer, ballroom dancing (with lessons, Mr. Wish-I-Could-Rumba) at the NCCS, USO Club, 1814 N st. nw. Negro servicemen will find games, skating and bicycle riding at the Phyllis Wheatley YWCA. All of this splendor, is at 7:30 p. m.

Service Men's Club No. 1, 306 9th st. nw., gives with dancing, refreshments, hostesses (ah!) and games at 8, and Friendship House, 619 D st. se., has a social hour at the same time.

Saturday, the big night, brings with it a multitude of dances and social events. Some of the highlights are: a tour of the city, followed by supper and a party—meet at the Service Men's Lounge of the National Gallery of Art at 2 p. m. Or, a floor show, games, refreshments and hostesses at the Salvation Army USO, 606 E st. nw, from 9 in the morning till midnight. From three p. m. till midnight, the NCCS Men's Club at 918 Tenth st. nw. holds dancing classes, dance (with two bands) refreshments, hostesses. Ooops! We forgot, you hold the refreshments and hostesses.

Strictly evening matters are the three dances at the YWCA (17th and K) which include refreshments and hostesses among the attractions. Service Men's Club No. 1 provides dancing, refreshments, hostesses, games and what have you at 8 p. m.; the Lichtman Leisure Lodge, 1439 U st. nw. gives with same for Negro Servicemen at the same hour. Or you may go to St. Margaret's Church (Connecticut Avenue above Florida) or the Parish House of St. John's (16th st. between H and I) for dancing, refreshments and entertainment (also women.) Phyllis Wheatley YWCA makes hay with a big dance at 9:00.

If you're not too broken down by Sunday, you should enjoy the available food and pleasure which is yours for the asking. The YMCA Java Club has breakfast and a nonsectarian religious discussion at 9:15 a. m. (1736 G st. nw.). Phyllis Wheatley "Y" has hostess club and brunch hour at 11:30.

Sunday afternoon—the deadliest piece of time in the world—may be brightened somewhat by the informal social time (with food and hostesses) at the Salvation Army USO Club from noon till 6 o'clock. Servicemen's Club No. 1 holds a fishing party and picnic at 1 and a skating party, open house, dancing and hostesses affair at 1:30. One of the most popular events of all (they tell us the food's the best in town) is the tea dance, followed by dinner, followed by more dancing at the NCCS, USO Club. Tea dance begins at 3 p. m., dinner dance begins at 6.

More in the line of supper is offered at the YMCA, along with games, movies, music and hostesses from 4 to 6:30 p. m. and at the YWCA, also starting at 4. Concordia Evangelical, Covenant First Presbyterian and Mount Vernon Place Methodist churches all feature supper for servicemen at 6 p. m.

Comes Monday and, if you're still around, there are more activities to divert your attention. The canteen of Servicemen's Club No. 1 is open every week day at 4 o'clock for snacks. Rhoads Service Club, 1315 4th st. sw., has informal dancing, games, singing and refreshments at 7:30 p. m. on Mondays. Servicemen's Club No. 1 has a dance, refreshments, hostesses and bridge club (with lessons) Mondays at 8. And then there's square dancing at the YWCA at 8:30.

Unrationed Shoes for Men

This is no high style item. You wouldn't wear it to business. It's a plain, canvass-topped oxford with a composition sole which will give your regulars a rest. It's a swell shoe for country wear, for odd-jobbing, for around the house.

A lot of attention has been given to unrationed shoes for the gentler sex, but this is the first of its kind (at least, that we've seen) for the male of the specie. That's why we wanted to let you know about it. It's sort of olive-drab in color and is about $3.50.

Your Figure, Madame!

By Ida Jean Kain

"What about giving us thin girls a diet that will put the meat on? There are plenty of us who need it!" And that S O S practically makes this a command article!

To begin at the beginning, you thin girls will have to think differently about food. Most of you seem to think you eat quite a lot, but your underweight is proof that you either do not eat enough or that your three meals a day do not measure up nutritionally.

It's easy for you to eat too few calories. You have such a small appetite that a very little food makes you feel satisfied. You can whet your appetite in a couple of ways. One is to get some exercise every day in the fresh air—a good long walk does wonders for you.

Another good measure is to step up your B vitamins. You can take more of these vitamins by using dried brewer's yeast, adding wheat germ to the breakfast cereal, or by taking the complex in concentrated form. The extra B vitamins won't take the place of calories, but they will help you to a more normal appetite and an interest in food.

If it doesn't take much to fill you up, you may have to increase gradually the amount you eat at each meal. Begin by taking one more slice of bread and a little more butter for lunch and dinner. Add cream to the fruit you eat, whether the fruit is canned or fresh. Ordinarily, you might not put cream on canned apricots. But try it! They're delicious that way. And you get a lot of calories that are easily digested.

Some of you thin girls have to get around that small food capacity by taking a lot of your extra calories between meals. That's an excellent idea as long as you don't spoil your appetite for meals! Don't take foods that are too rich, like cake, candy, ice cream sodas and sundaes. Get your calories in a glass of milk, a glass of milk with an egg beaten into it, or a glass of orange juice with a beaten egg. You can have any one of those mid-morning or mid-afternoon. They are high in calories and nutrition. Before going to bed is another good time to get your milk. You may not feel like drinking with your dinner which is usually a fairly large meal, so leave your milk until later. Sometimes during the day, have four glasses.

Besides being a help to your appetite, the daily walk in the fresh air improves your general muscle tone and that's all to the good.

Satisfying Salad Made From Your Garden Produce

If perchance your victory garden is sufficiently productive to make tomatoes, green peppers, and cabbage available to you, "Popularity Salad" is what you'll want to be preparing. It is made exceptionally satisfying to hungry appetites, with cottage cheese and meaty ripe olives which combine appetizingly with the garden fresh vegetables. If you do not have a garden there's always your dependable market to patronize.

POPULARITY SALAD

Cut pits from 1 cup whole ripe olives and combine with 1 cup cottage cheese, 1 cup shredded cabbage, 2 cups diced tomatoes, ½ cup chopped green sweet peppers, 2 tablespoons mayonnaise, 2 tablespoons French dressing and salt to taste. Blend well and serve on garnished salad plates.

Sons of King Ibn Saud End Visit To Capital Today; to Tour Southwest

By Marie McNair

From far-distant Arabia, two modern princes of the desert, swathed in costly robes and jeweled turbans, have stepped into the Washington wartime scene, bringing with them a breath of the romantic, colorful country that is theirs, the land of the twice told tales "A Thousand and One Nights."

From their seat in the cradle of civilization where fleet-footed steeds race the wide expanses of sand, these modern Lochinvars from the East, made the trip by fast plane over the ocean. Their names? His Royal Highness Amir-Faisal, Foreign Minister of Saudi, Arabia, second son of the desert Napoleon, King Ibn Saud; his brother, His Royal Highness Amir Khalid. And with them is Arabia's Minister to London, Shikh Hafiz Wahbu.

From the moment of their arrival on Thursday, this pictorial trio have been the center of a round of entertainment, which came to a close yesterday with the large reception at which the Minister of Egypt and Mme. Hassan were hosts. When they leave Washington today they will go to New York and from there leave for a tour of the Southwest to study irrigation, primary objective of their visit to this country.

Party Carries Out Good-Neighbor Policy

"I'm only carrying out your good-neighbor policy" said the Minister yesterday apropos of the party. "But our good-neighbors speak the same language, you know."

These good-neighbors of Egypt seemed to extend the same policy to all comers yesterday for, as they stood with the Minister and Mme. Hassan to welcome the guests they had a special greeting for everyone, bowing low over the hands of the ladies, and giving the men a hearty handshake.

The princes' robes were of a delicately woven brown material bordered and piped with gold. Their headdresses of white were wound around with gold and black silken ropes, which miraculously stayed "put" by means of a gossamer silken thread.

Mme. Hassen, found time to wander through the drawing room suite with a word for her special friends, her slender figure in a long fitted gown of deep amethyst satin brightened about the waistline with sequins in green and rose tones, and a spray of fragrant gardenias pinned to her shoulder.

Movie cameras were in operation yesterday, to send the films back to Arabia, so that the receiving line was broken up early, while the royal guests were "shot" at the flower-decked buffet table, laden with rich Eastern tea-time specialties which included colorful iced cakes with the flags of Arabia and Egypt as adornment.

The Turkish Ambassador and Mme. Ertegun were among the guests and glimpsed in the dining room were the British Minister, Sir Ronald Campbell, the Minister of Iraq, and Mme. Jawdat, who had entertained for the visitors on Saturday; the Minister of Afghanistan, Abdol Hosayn Aziz, Justice and Mrs. Stanley Reed, Senator Joseph Guffey with his sister, Mrs. Guffey Miller; Representative Sol Bloom with his daughter, Miss Vera Bloom.

Mrs. Hurley Wears Russian Turban

Gen. Patrick J. Hurley, President Roosevelt's roving Ambassador, smart and straight in uniform, was with handsome Mrs. Hurley, whose all-black costume was topped with a broadtail turban, brought back by General Hurley from Russia.

Others here and there were Senator Claude Pepper, with pretty Mrs. Pepper in black, her hair done high with ribbon bows in rose green and black in her hair; Wallace Murray of the State Department, Col. M. Robert Guggenheim, not far from Mrs. Guggenheim, who took her turn at the tea table, and lovely Mme. Kutlu, wife of the Second Secretary of the Turkish Embassy, who also poured tea during the early afternoon, making an effective picture in a black moire gown with a veil of gold lace and a purple orchid tucked in her dark hair.

Mrs. McCeney Werlich had her young son, Lieut. Robert Werlich, who towered far above the group, with her, and others there were Clarence Hewes, Mr. and Mrs. Morris Cafritz, Mrs. McCook Knox, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Britten, Dr. and Mrs. William F. O'Donnell, Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Morris, Pierre Bedard, Lieut. George Abell, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Duell, Mrs. Bruce Wallace and Miss Anne Michell of Greenwich, Conn., who is in Washington for the season.

Aviation Cadet Found Slain In Ga. Creek

By the Associated Press

Albany, Ga., Oct. 3.—The badly battered body of an aviation cadet, identified as Roger Dardis McNamee of Hudson, N. Y., was found in a creek near here yesterday, Coroner C. W. Thomas announced today.

Turner Field officers said McNamee was last seen Tuesday, September 26, when he reported out on furlough from the field. He was the son of Mrs. D. V. McNamee of Hudson.

Lieut. Col. John P. O'Brien, Turner Field hospital commandant, told a coroner's jury today that the cadet had been dead at least 72 hours "before my examination was made." The surgeon said death was due to multiple fractures of the face and skull and fracture and dislocation of the spine.

He testified further that in his opinion " it would have been impossible for one person to inflict the multiple injuries found on the cadet's body."

Relatives had enlisted the aid of a New York Telephone Co. executive last Wednesday, when the youth did not arrive home and repeated calls to Turner Field brought word that he had left.

Laura Ingalls' Beating at Lorton Confirmed by Huff

Ray L. Huff, superintendent of District of Columbia penal institutions, last night confirmed reports that Laura Ingalls, convicted Nazi agent, had been badly beaten by fellow inmates of the reformatory at Lorton, Va., but denied that the assault was brought on by attempts of the former aviatrix to promote Nazi race doctrine in the prison.

Miss Ingalls has since been transferred to a Federal prison in West Virginia.

"The woman was assaulted for purely personal reasons," Huff asserted. "I have no knowledge of political or racial philosophy entering into it," he declared.

According to one report, the beating culminated a long series of near-riots that the aviatrix started in jail after her plea for parole was turned down in October, 1942.

The report said that Miss Ingalls had tried to organize white prisoners against the Negroes by preaching a pure Nazi policy of race hatred. No weapons were used in the attack, it was said, but the woman suffered a broken nose, two black eyes and fractured ribs.

Public Health Good In Naples Despite Lack of Utilities

Naples, Oct. 3 (INS).—Despite lack of food, power, water and other utilities in Naples for three weeks, the public health was reported good today by AMG (Allied Military Government).

There have been no epidemics and only 4 cases of typhus and 13 cases of typhoid in September.

Instead of the 4000 bodies reported in the shattered streets, doctors found only 200 in hospitals and homes and promptly buried them.

Food is short but stores of flour and bread have been discovered in large quantities in the old jail.

F. R. Baukhage, 77, Dies After Long Illness

Frederick Robert Baukhage, of 1725 17th st. nw., father of H. R. Baukhage, the radio commentator, died last night in Garfield Hospital after an illness of nine months. He would have been 77 October 12.

Born in Germany, son of a Supreme Court judge, Mr. Baukhage came to this country at the age of 21 to study law at Harvard and visit relatives who had migrated to Illinois.

He decided to join the Indian Scouts and took part in the last of the Indian warfare in Idaho instead of attending Harvard. Later he returned to Illinois, became a naturalized citizen and married Alice Daiken Blood, writer of children's stories.

When he came to Washington 17 years ago, Mr. Baukhage was employed in the Office of the Alien Property Custodian, and remained there until he took a post in the Commodity Credit Corp., which he held at his death.

His son is the only survivor. Funeral arrangements will be announced later.

Two Destroyer Escorts Launched At Newark Yards

Newark, N. J., Oct. 3 (AP).—Two destroyer escorts, the Gustafson and the Miles, were launched today at the Federal Shipbuilding & Dry Dock Co. under the sponsoring hands of widows of two naval officers.

First to slide into Newark Bay was the Gustafson, named for Lieut. Arthur Leonard Gustafson, a native of Watertown, S. Dak., who was killed in the bombing of the destroyer Peary by the Japanese at Darwin, Australia, on February 19, 1942.

The Miles was named for Lieut. (j. g.) Samuel Stockton Miles, an assistant surgeon, killed in action August 7, 1942, in the Solomon Islands during the Guadalcanal-Tulagi occupation.

Dr. Wei Declares Peace Rests on Economic Equity

Charleston, W. Va., Oct. 3 (AP).—Dr. Wei Tao-ming, Chinese Ambassador to the United States, declared today that only political and economic equity among all peoples of the globe would bring world peace.

"To have peace and a better world, we must constantly develop harmony of interests and desires among all peoples," Dr. Wei asserted. . . . "Men can work together best as equal partners with equal rights and duties."

Dr. Wei pictured Japan with century-old ambitions for world domination, declaring that such designs were based on the dream 2600 years ago of Emperor Jimmu, who envisioned "covering the eight corners of the earth under one Japanese roof."

Bishop Tucker Opens Convention

Cleveland, Oct. 3 (AP).—Spiritual and moral rehabilitation for people made destitute by the war is "no less essential than physical relief," the Rt. Rev. Henry St. George Tucker of Richmond, Va., declared today in keynoting the fifty-fourth triennial Protestant Episcopal Convention.

The presiding bishop addressed a joint session of the bicameral church conclave, which opened yesterday with the organization of the house of bishops and the house of clerical and lay deputies.

Hammond succeeds D. Grant Mickle, traffic engineer of the Automotive Safety Foundation and former traffic engineer of Detroit.

Johnston Sees Job Challenge To Industry

The nations of the world never will go back to mass unemployment, Eric A. Johnston, president of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, said yesterday in a broadcast press conference.

And this, he continued, confronts industry at once with tremendous responsibilty and great opportunity.

Questioned by John M. Hightower, member of the Washington staff of the Associated Press, he agreed that "of course" it is true that "if industry doesn't do the job, Government will have to."

Johnston spoke on the Blue Network broadcast of the "Wake Up America Forum," answering questions submitted from New Orleans and developing details of his answers under questioning from Hightower, Phillips H. Peck of the International News Service and Merriman Smith of the United Press.

A Great Opportunity

Continuing with his response to Hightower's queries on industry's employment task, Johnston asserted:

"We can mold and form and shape and direct the destinies of our country to come. It is a tremendous responsibility, but also it is a great opportunity—a great opportunity to raise the standard of living and to make it possible for us really to enjoy the fruits of our industry more than ever before in America."

The exchange arose out of Johnston's reply to questions submitted by Phillip Murray, president of the Congress of Industrial Organizations, and William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor.

Murray wanted to know whether the Chamber of Commerce head was prepared to support Government activity to provide jobs "under conditions of full productive efficiency, production, and American standards of work and living," if private enterprise could not do the job alone after the war. Green asked whether private industry would provide jobs for all, "and if so, how?"

Confident of Labor's Aid

"Yes," Johnson answered, "if private industry can't supply employment at reasonable wages, of course Government will. There is no doubt about that."

He said he felt sure, from previous contacts, of the cooperation of the labor leaders in efforts to stimulate private enterprise through removal of unnecessary restrictions, incentive taxation, and a "friendly attitude."

At another point in the broadcast, replying to a question submitted by Joseph B. David, president of the New Orleans Sugar Bowl Association, Johnston said that the most helpful attitude government could take would be "to stimulate free enterprise, to stimulate business, to stimulate the individual, to stimulate the farmer, to his greatest productive capacity."

4 Dead, 78 Hurt In California Forest Blaze

San Diego, Calif., Oct. 3 (AP).—A timber and brush fire which has swept 2000 acres and taken a toll of four dead and 78 injured, broke out in new ferocity today, and was reported out of control.

Additional fire fighting experts came here by plane to augment hundreds of civilian and military personnel battling the raging blaze in hilly country 45 miles southeast of San Diego.

Naval officials investigated the deaths of four marines and the injury of 76 others, all trapped by the flames along with two civilian fire fighters. Thirteen were reported in critical condition.

Coupon Coal Ration Called Ineffective

Asserting that coupon rationing of coal would be ineffective, Abe Fortas, Undersecretary of the Interior in supervision of the Solid Fuels Administration, yesterday declared that equitable distribution would continue as the basis for coal allocations.

Speaking on the "Washington Reports on Rationing" program over WRC, Fortas admitted that in some instances "we have had to limit the amount of coal that can be delivered to retailers and to consumers," but contended, "we are not convinced that coupon rationing would work for coal."

He admitted that consumers will have to "get along with less coal," however, as American mines are half a million tons behind weekly production schedules.

To those who have been wondering whether their conversion from fuel oil to coal last year was advisable in view of the current shortages, Fortas said, "consumers who burn coal will be able to keep warmer than those who burn oil." He advocated a longer work day for mine operators, who now work seven hours daily.

Questioned by Ernest K. Lindley, post columnist, Fortas alleged the consumer can best cooperate with the coal industry by:

1. Using his coal in the most efficient way.
2. Heating as few rooms as possible.
3. Properly weatherstripping and insulating his home.
4. Keeping his furnace in good condition.
5. Utilizing lower grades and less desirable sizes of coal.

Sergt. J. B. Logan Wins Second Air Service Award

Sergt. John B. Logan of 3632 Warren st. nw., has been awarded the Oak Leaf Cluster to the Air Medal for meritorious achievement while participating in a bombing mission over Shortland Harbor in the Solomons on January 18, the War Department announced yesterday.

During the attack, his plane was in a squadron that scored three direct hits and six near misses on an enemy transport of 15,000 tons, despite antiaircraft fire so heavy and accurate that it shattered the windshields of the planes. On withdrawal from the target, the formation of bombers fought off an interception of enemy planes and shot down two fighters, the War Department stated.

Last August, when Sergeant Logan, a radio operator and gunner on a Flying Fortress, received the Distinguished Flying Cross, it was reported that his squadron, the oldest of the Army Air Force in point of service, had completed from 80 to 100 combat missions during 19 months of fighting in the Pacific without any loss of equipment or personnel.

Sergeant Logan, who was in Washington two weeks ago visiting his mother, Mrs. Ellen C. Logan, of the Warren st. address, is now stationed at Salt Lake City, Utah, awaiting a new combat assignment. A native of Washington, the 26-year-old airman attended St. John's School and the Bliss Electrical School. He was inducted into the Army in February, 1942, and was stationed at Camp Lee and Keesler Field, Miss., before going overseas.

Air Reconnaissance Post Goes to Colonel Hall

The War Department yesterday announced the appointment of Col. James G. Hall as chief of the reconnaissance branch, Office of the Assistant Chief of Air Staff for Operations, Commitments and Requirements.

Colonel Hall recently returned from England, where he was commanding officer of the photo reconnaissance and mapping group of the Eighth Air Force. His home is at Rivercrest, Fort Worth, Tex., and he was a member of the New York Stock Exchange for 15 years.

Dewey Visions Expansion of Social Service

By the Associated Press

New York, Oct. 3.—Gov. Thomas E. Dewey tonight predicted a post-war expansion of social service in which voluntary and governmental agencies will cooperate to heal the heavy scars that the State and Nation will bear "both spiritually and physically" after the war.

Addressing the merged New York and Brooklyn Federation of Jewish Charities, Dewey outlined a program for more effective and economical social welfare, which he said represented a minimum program to:

1. Bring related welfare activities into an effective working team.
2. Simplify administrative machinery.
3. Develop a more skilled corps of public servants, selected and retained on a basis of merit.
4. Plan ahead to meet changing conditions, so as to avoid "emergency" programs and agencies.

Additionally, Dewey listed among "great areas in which much remains to be done," and in which public and voluntary agencies could cooperate, the study and treatment of mental diseases, medical research and health education, and the problem of juvenile delinquency.

The Republican Governor said of postwar expansion in social service that he envisioned a growth of voluntary medical and social services financed by private citizens supplementing and cooperating with expanded Government services.

Women's Group To Continue Drive To Sell U. S. Bonds

Although the District passed its 94-million-dollar goal, officials of the District War Finance Committee are resolved to continue in the Third War Loan drive with sales of Series E, F and G bonds to individuals.

Despite the fact that the District went over the top by more than 300,000, the Capital fell below its quota in selling bonds to individuals. The great volume of sales to business corporations filled the gap caused by failure to reach the quota of individual purchasers.

Mrs. Howard G. Nichols, chairman of the Women's Division, told her committee chairmen at a rally meting: "We must not let up even now, though the drive is officially over. We must sell more bonds to individuals. Thousands of our boys have already fought, but they can't stop when they feel they have bought enough."

Crime in France At Lowest Point; Guns, Drink Scarce

Copyright, 1943, New York Tribune, Inc.

London, Oct. 3.—Crime in France reached its lowest point during the judiciary year just completed, according to a French criminal lawyer and active underground worker who has just arrived in London from Paris.

The decrease was attributed chiefly to the difficulty of obtaining firearms and the restriction on alcohol. Most trials in the Paris court were for crimes committeed with knives, which the lawyer said, explained why few women were tried, a knife being the least weapon a woman will use.

Many women have been tried lately in various parts of France for causing death by abortionist practices. The courts have been ordered to deal ruthlessly with these cases and three death sentences have been pronounced. Two women, the paper says, already have been guillotined.

September Raids From Britain Cut By Bad Weather

London (Monday), Oct. 4 (AP).—British bombers unloaded 14,000 long tons of bombs on Germany and occupied countries in September, or 5000 tons less than the previous month, the air ministry announced today.

Unsettled weather made the month the worst since January for heavy bomber operations, but 10 major attacks were made, principally in Germany, including one attack on Berlin.

Enemy aircraft destroyed totaled 190, as against an RAF loss of 282. This compared with 381 British planes lost and 161 enemy planes destroyed in the previous month.

Bombs were dropped on England by the enemy on nine nights and fewer than 140 enemy aircraft operated over the country during the month.

British day fighters had the best month of the year, shooting down 134 enemy aircraft to raise the year's total to more than 600.

Big Guns Duel Across Channel

London (Monday), Oct. 4 (AP).—British and German big guns engaged in a lively duel across the Channel last night.

The British opened fire shortly before 10:30 p. m., perhaps at an enemy convoy attempting to run the narrow waterway. The heavy German batteries near Cap Griz Nez replied 20 minutes later. Shells fell in the vicinity of Dover.
